The Abbey church of St. James, St. Milburga and St. Mirin, is the parish church of the New Town of Paisley and an extensive rural district lying around the town. The church was originally 251 feet in length, with a central tower and an elegant choir, without aisles, 123 feet long and 32 feet wide; as now existing, it consists only of the nave, with aisles, north and south transepts, and central tower, restored to a height of nearly 90 feet, north porch, with parvise, and a small but lofty chapel on the south side: the choir has almost entirely disappeared, only a few feet of the height of its walls remaining above ground: within the choir lie the remains of Walter Fitzalan, the first of the Scottish Stewarts, Marjory Bruce, the two wives of King Robert II. and King Robert III. himself: over their resting place a chaste monument of Sicilian marble was placed by Her late Majesty Queen Victoria in commemoration of her visit to Paisley in 1888. The extant portion of the church is almost entirely Early English; the nave, of six bays, 93 by about 60 feet, has triforium and clerestory, and the west front is arranged in three stages: the lowermost has a recessed doorway of seven orders, flanked by blind lancets, all the arch mouldings being relieved with dogtooth ornament; in the second stage are two lofty Decorated windows, of three lights each, with Geometrical tracery; the gable is lighted by a similar window of five lights, and over it is a quatrefoil; the whole is flanked by tall and narrow buttresses and square turrets, and at the western angles of the aisle are other turrets, with spired caps: the groined roof, 82 feet high, is now concealed by a coved ceiling: under the recent restoration the rough stone walls which filled in the arches between the chapel and the south transept since the fall of the central tower in 1549, have been removed, and the chapel forms part of the church, as it did originally. The windows are mostly filled with stained glass, and include memorial windows to Mr. John Polson, to the families of Clark, Coats and Arthur, as well as to the Hamiltons, Dukes of Abercorn, and to the Cathcart, Shaw-Stewart and other noble families. Extensive resoration work is now (1915) in progress.

The High church, which stands on a fine eminence called Church hill, laid out on its northern slope in gardens, was built in 1754 at a cost of £1,600, and renovated in 1877 at an expense of £4,000: an organ was provided in 1898, at a cost of about £2,150: it will seat 1,313 persons.

St. George's church, built in 1820, at a cost of £6,183, was renovated in 1894, and has sittings for 1,300 persons.

The North church, in Love street, built in 1834 and rebuilt in 1889, is a plain building of stone in the Gothic style, and has sittings for 725 persons.

The Middle parish church, on Church hill, built in 1781, was renovated in 1885, and affords 870 sittings.

St. Columba's or the Gaelic church, in Oakshaw street, is a very plain stone building erected in 1793, and will seat 444 persons.

The Episcopal church of Holy Trinity, built in 1833, will seat 325 persons: the Rev. Charles Leonard Weatherburn M.A. of Durham University, has been rector since 1910. The Episcopal Mission church of St. Barnabas, erected in 1893, affords 350 sittings: the Rev. Alastair Gray-Buchanan M.A. of Corpus Christi College, Oxford, has been priest in charge since 1914.

The Thomas Coats Memorial Baptist church, in High street, was erected in memory of Thomas Coats esq. a local philanthropist.

There are also United Free, Roman Catholic, Reformed Presbyterian and Wesleyan Methodist churches and Baptist, Congregational and Primitive Methodist chapels and Salvation Army barracks.

The Technical College and School of Art, erected in George street, at a cost of over £25,000, was designed by Mr. T. G. Abercrombie, architect, in the style of the Italian Renaissance, and exhibits a façade 120 feet in length, and three storeys high, arranged as a central block with slightly advanced wings, and an open lantern of several stages, rising from the ridge of the roof. On the ground floor are a large vestibule, board room, principal and art masters' rooms and offices, as well as accommodation for the School of Art. The rest of the building is occupied by class rooms for science, engineering and technology. The courses of study include classes for Matriculation and the Intermediate and Final Examinations for the Science and Engineering Degrees of the London University.

The John Neilson Educational Institution, Oakshawhead, richly endowed by the late John Neilson esq. (a citizen of Paisley), was opened in 1852, and is a massive structure, occupying an elevated site, and surmounted by a lofty dome.

The Camphill Public School, situated on an eminence, is the largest elementary school in Scotland, and will hold 1,900 scholars.

There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the Clydesdale Bank Limited, the British Linen Co. Bank, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the Royal Bank of Scotland, the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited, Mercantile Bank of Scotland Limited and Farrow's Bank Limited. There is also a Savings Bank, which occupies premises in High street, Wellmeadow street and Neilston road.

The Fountain Gardens, the gift of the late Thomas Coats esq. of Ferguslie House, extending between Love street and Caledonia street, comprise six acres of ground, tastefully laid out, with a large ornamental fountain in the centre, and a smaller one at each of the four angles of the gardens.

Brodie Park was originally a farm of 26 acres, bequeathed to the Town Council of Paisley many years ago by the late Mr. Brodie.

Races are held annually in August on a picturesque course half a mile from the town, near the Greenock road. This ground, comprising 40 acres, has, by Act of Parliament, become the property of the community, and is now named St. James's Park.

The weekly market is held on Monday, and the fairs on the third Thursdays in February and May and the second Thursday in August and November respectively. February and August are the principal for cattle: August fair and races take place at the same date and last for two days. Those of May and November are mostly for hiring servants.

Two newspapers are published in Paisley viz., the "Express," daily, and the "Paisley and Renfrewshire Gazette," weekly.

Alexander Wilson, the celebrated writer on American ornithology, was born here in 1766, and died 23 August, 1813; Robert Tannahill, a weaver and lyric poet, was also a native of Paisley, where he was born 3 June, 1774: he was the author of several still popular ballads, but died by his own act, 17 May, 1810. Here also, 19 May, 1785, was born the celebrated John Wilson, best known as Christopher North, and famous both as a critic, essayist and wit: he was educated at Magdalen College, Oxford, where he took his degree, and also carried off various University honours, including, in 1806, the Newdigate prize for English verse, besides highly distinguishing himself in athletic contests. In 1820 he became professor of moral philosophy at Edinburgh, but his chief reputation rests on the "Noctes Ambrosianæ," a series of papers contributed to Blackwood's Magazine (1822-35); he died at Edinburgh, 3 April, 1854. Dr. John Witherspoon, long the minister of one of the parishes here, wrote several of his best theological works in Paisley prior to his emigration in 1768 to America, where he became president of the college at Princeton, where he died 15 November, 1794.

The mitred abbey of Paisley was founded in the year 1163 by Walter, great steward of Scotland, and son of Alan, the first of the Stewarts, who, for a long period, made this abbey their family mausoleum. It was originally a Cluniac priory, colonised from the abbey of Much or Great Wenlock, in Shropshire, and dedicated to SS. James, Milburga and Mirinus, but was afterwards elevated to the rank of an abbey and its lands erected into a regality by James II. the abbot being constituted lord thereof. Abbot George Schaw, in 1484, surrounded the abbey precincts with a lofty wall of hewn stone, a mile in circumference, the greater part of which has been demolished, but a portion still remains, and there exists a rhyming inscription setting forth Abbot Schaw as its builder. This inscription, once on a tablet in the wall, is now inserted in a house in Lawn street. The monastic church is now the parish church of New Paisley: there were cloisters on the south side 60 feet square, but the domestic buildings have largely disappeared.

In 1560, after the Reformation, the abbey and lands were made a temporal barony in favour of Lord Claud Hamilton, third son of James, 2nd Earl of Arran, and Duke of Chatelherault, in France, on whom was conferred the title of Lord Paisley in 1652. The abbey lands were transferred from James, 2nd Earl of Abercorn and grandson of Claud, Baron Paisley, to the Earl of Angus, and from him passed in 1653 to Lord Dundonald, but the greater portion became the property, by purchase in 1764, of John James, 9th Earl and 1st Marquess of Abercorn, who eventually let it on building leases; so that the park, orchard and gardens of the abbey subsequently became the site of the new town of Paisley, and the materials of the monastery were used in the erection of the houses.

Fergushe Park, the seat of Sir Thomas Glen Glen-Coats bart. V.D. Lord Lieutenant of the County, and Hawkhead House, the property of the trustees of the late William Stevenson, but now (1915) vacant, are in this parish.

The area of the newly constituted parish is 16,838 acres; population in 1911, 109,782; rateable value, £ Area of the burgh, 3,487 acres; rateable value, £441,713. The population of the burgh in 1901 was 99,899, and in 1911, 109,782, viz.: burgh, 84,455; Barrhead burgh, 1,509; Johnstone burgh, 12,045; landward, 11,773.

The population of the wards in 1911 was:—First, 8,084; second, 11,038; third, 12,074; fourth, 9,959; fifth, 13,319; sixth, 7,361; seventh, 15,291; eighth, 7,289.

The population of the ecclesiastical parishes in 1911 was:—Abbey, 15,781; Greenlaw, 12,531; High Church, 10,053; Low Church, 6,684; Martyrs, 12,253; Middle, 7,480; North, 7,695; St. Columba, 4,908; South Church, 10,060.

Included in the total population was 162 patients and 66 officials in the Royal Alexandra Infirmary; 115 in the Industrial School; 114 in Kibble Reformatory for Boys; 34 officials and 507 inmates of the Paisley Poorhouse; 307 inmates and 28 officials in Renfrewshire Combination Poorhouse; 30 officials and 175 inmates of the Paisley District Asylum; 262 inmates and 42 officials in Renfrew District Asylum, and 268 inmates and 18 officials in Nazareth House for Orphans and Aged People.

The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1915 was 13,587.

POLLOKSHAWS, see GLASGOW

PORT GLASGOW is a seaport, and parish, town, police and parliamentary burgh, pleasantly situated on the south bank of the river Clyde, 20 miles northwest from Glasgow and 3 east from Greenock, with a station on the Greenock section of the Caledonian railway. It formerly belonged to the parish of Kilmalcolm, but in 1695 it was erected into a separate parochial district. The town, which partly stands on the old barony of Newark, is neatly and regularly built; the streets run at right angles to each other and are lighted with gas. It is protected on the south by a range of high hills, and the lower grounds in the vicinity of the town have many good houses. The harbours are remarkable for their facility of entry and egress. Contiguous to the harbours is a large graving dock, which has been extended and improved at a very considerable cost, and there is also a wet dock. The number of vessels entering and clearing the port are included with the Greenock returns. The number of vessels registered under Part I. of the "Merchant Shipping Act, 1894," as belonging to the port, December 31st, 1913, was 13, with an aggregate tonnage of 6,004. Connected with the town are eight shipbuilding establishments, some of which are upon an extensive scale and employ many hands. In 1913, 31 vessels were built of 62,954 tons. In addition 12 vessels of 34,497 net tonnage were built for foreigners in 1913. There are also saw mills, roperies, sail cloth factories and engineering and sail making works. The burgh is governed by a provost, four bailies and seven councillors, with a town clerk and other officers. A burgh police court sits every Monday and Thursday and a justice of peace court on alternate Mondays. Port Glasgow, together with Renfrew, Rutherglen, Dumbarton and Kilmarnock, forms the Kilmarnock parliamentary district, returning one member. Port Glasgow parish church, erected upon the site of the old one, is a purely modern structure. The Town House, erected in 1815, at a cost of nearly £12,000, is a structure in the Classic style, and has a tower with spire 150 feet in height, and containing a clock; the interior includes a council chamber, court hall, police station, and offices for the town clerk and other public officers. The Town Hall, in Princes street, is a large stone building, used for public meetings &c. and contains an organ given in 1902 by Andrew Carnegie esq. The Moffat Library is an elegant building at the north end of King street, erected in 1887 from part of a bequest left by the late James Moffat, merchant, Port Glasgow, and comprises, besides the library, reading, billiard and smoking rooms. Broadstone Jubilee Hospital was built in 1907 and contains 23 beds. The Carnegie Park Orphan Homes, at the east end of the town, and erected from the same bequest, were built at a cost of about £7,000.

There is an annual fair, which takes place on the first Thursday in July, and continues for three days. Birkmyre Park, consisting of 9 acres, presented to the town by William Birkmyre esq. ex-M.P. and situated at Glen Huntly, was opened in July, 1895, and includes two bowling greens, a football field and a quoit pitch. Sir Michael Hugh Shaw-Stewart bart. J.P. is the principal landowner. The area of the civil parish comprises 1,018 acres; rateable value of the whole parish, £74,110; area of burgh, 444 acres; the population of the parish in 1901 was 16,888, and the burgh, 16,857; and in 1911, parish 17,775, burgh 17,749; the population of the wards in 1911 was, First, 5,498; Second, 4,772; Third, 4,405; Fourth, 3,074; the population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911 was 10,685.

The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1915 was 3,488.

NEWARK is a quoad sacra parish erected out of that of Port Glasgow. The ancient castle of Newark, formerly occupied by the Maxwells of Pollok, is now the property of His Majesty's Board of Works, having been transferred to them by Sir Michael Hugh Shaw-Stewart bart. of Duchal, and Vice-Lieut. of Renfrewshire, as representative of the Maxwells of Pollok and Springkell; the ruins are well preserved, and from the site a fine view is obtained of the Clyde and its adjacent scenery, particularly the wild and singularly-formed rocky eminence on which stands the castle of Dumbarton. Population in 1911, 4,016.

QUARRELTON, see ELDERSLIE.

RALSTON now forms part of the new civil parish of Paisley.

RANFURLY, see BRIDGE OF WEIR.

RENFREW is an ancient town and royal burgh and the capital of the county, and a parish in Paisley small debt court district and poor combination, and is 50 miles west from Edinburgh, 13 east-by-south from Port Glasgow, 6 west from Glasgow, and 3 north from Paisley; a short distance from the Clyde, and 1 mile east from the White Cart; the parish lying on both banks of the Clyde. The town, which has four stations, two on the Glasgow and South-Western railway and two on the Glasgow and Renfrew District railway, consists of three good streets, from which several smaller ones issue, and it is well lighted with gas. There are two extensive shipbuilding yards, with a dock capable of accommodating vessels of large burthen, and also a commodious and substantial wharf, at which the largest vessels frequenting the river may discharge and load with as great facility as at Glasgow. The main line of the Paisley and Renfrew railway is connected with this wharf, at which passengers to and from the river steamers navigating the Clyde arrive, and here goods are also shipped and discharged by the Liverpool, Irish and other boats. Renfrew received its first charter from Robert III. in 1396, and in 1614 James VI. granted a charter for a school; it also gives the title of baron to the Prince of Wales. As a royal burgh, Renfrew is governed by a provost, two bailies and nine councillors. A magistrate's court sits every alternate Monday; and quarter sessions are held on the first Tuesday in March, May and August, and last Tuesday in October. Renfrew, together with Port Glasgow, Dumbarton, Kilmarnock and Rutherglen, forms the Kilmarnock parliamentary district, returning one member. The Brown Institute, in Canal street, was presented to the town by Andrew Brown esq. The parish church, built in 1862, is an edifice of stone in the Gothic style, erected in the form of a Greek cross, and has a tower with a tall and graceful spire. Within the church lie two stone figures of Sir John Ross, of Hawkhead, and his wife, and on one of the walls is a marble tablet to the late Archibald Douglas Campbell esq. of Blythswood (d. 1868), grandfather of the present Lord Blythswood: a brass has also been erected by the Rt. Hon. James Parker Smith P.C. to his father and grandfather, and there is a marble tablet to the late Rev. Robert Stephen, for 39 years minister. The Established church affords sittings for 1,050 persons. Walter Stewart built a castle here, on an eminence called Castle-hill, by the margin of the Clyde; and Renfrew was an early and favourite residence of the Stewart family, long ere they ascended the Scottish throne. There are besides United Free and Roman Catholic churches, Baptist and Congregational chapels, an Evangelistic Hall and Salvation Army Barracks. The Episcopal Mission church of St. Margaret is in Fulbar street. On 22 April, 1907, the town was visited by T. M. King George V. and Queen Mary, then the Prince and Princess of Wales, being on their way to open the new buildings of Glasgow, and received an address from the provost and council, afterwards proceeding to Blythswood. Blythswood, the seat of Rev. Lord Blythswood M.A., J.P. is situated on the banks of the Clyde in this parish. Rev. Lord Blythswood M.A., J.P. Alexander Archibald Hagart Speirs esq. J.P. the Earl of Home K.T., V.D. and James Gordon Oswald esq. are the chief landowners. The area of the parish comprises 4,248 acres; of the burgh, 1,590 acres; rateable value, £68,600. The population in 1901 was 15,142, and in 1911, 27,434, of which 12,565 was in the parliamentary and royal burgh.

The population of the wards in 1911 was: first or Meadowside, 2,028; second or Blythswood, 2,766; third or Townhead, 2,372; fourth or Moorpark, 5,399.

The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911 was 12,926.

SCOTSTOUNHILL is a village in Renfrew civil parish.

ANNIESLAND is a village in the parish.

The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1915 was 2,574.

THE COUNTY OF ROSS AND CROMARTY

THIS is a large county in the north of Scotland, and includes the districts of Easter and Wester Ross, Ardmeanach or the Black Isle, and four-fifths of the Island of Lewis, and the former county of Cromarty: this last, being formed of scattered portions within and adjoining Ross, was, under the Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889, united for all purposes with the county of Ross. The present outline is irregular and the boundaries on the east and west sides touch the North Sea and the Atlantic Ocean: the west coast of the Mainland is much indented with bays and lochs, and its actual water boundary is the North Minch, the strait which divides it from the Isle of Lewis. On the north and north-east the county of Sutherland forms the boundary as far as Dornoch Firth, from there southwards to the Beauly basin the North Sea and Moray Firth constitute the eastern boundary, and thence Inverness with the Isle of Skye extend around the south and south-west borders: the Ross portion of the Isle of Lewis being bounded by Harris, the portion of the island belonging to Inverness on the south, the North Minch on the east and the Atlantic on the north and west: the portion of the Isle of Lewis belonging to the county measures 40 miles from north to south by 25 in breadth, while the part belonging to the Mainland extends from east to west 67 miles and from north to south 58 miles. It comprises an area of 1,977,428 acres of land and 72,974 of water, and in point of size ranks as the third, and in population as the twelfth of the counties of Scotland. The population in 1901 was 76,450 and in 1911, 73,364, viz.: males, 38,763, and females, 77,364. The inhabited houses being in 1901, 16,049, and in 1911, 16,118 inhabited, 949 uninhabited and 89 building.

Of the early history of this county but little is known: it was at the time the Romans came to these parts inhabited by three tribes, the principal of which, the Caledonii, must have been a part of a larger Sept, as the name occurs in other districts in 1135. There was an Earl of Ross, but this title early became extinct.

Soil, Surface, Climate, Produce &c.—The portion of this extensive county capable of cultivation is very small. The arable lands extend along the eastern coast, and are found in patches here and there on the western; a great proportion of the low lands of Easter Ross, and a small portion of those near Dingwall, is loamy clay, the rest being light soil of various qualities. The whole of this comprehensive shire, except a district on the east side called Easter Ross, is mountainous, wild and pastoral; the mountains are for the most part in groups, many of them reaching a considerable elevation, where they appear in continuous chains from north-west to south-east, and the lochs necessarily follow the same direction. The most lofty mountains are Ben Dearg, 3,547 feet; More, 3,505; Teallach, 3,474; Wyvis, 3,429; Alton, 3,383; Slioch, 3,217; Eag, 3,160; Fin, 3,060 and Ben Alligin, 3,015, besides which, on the confines of Ross and Inverness, is Main Soul, 3,862. Almost the whole of the west coast presents magnificent mountain scenery, and the interior is in general picturesque. The climate is unsteady, and exhibits the extremes of long, dreary, cold winters and some very hot summer weather, and the west coast is subject to heavy rains. The natural forests, which formerly covered large tracts, have nearly all disappeared, with the exception of the birch and some oaks in different parts of the county; the remains of firwood are extensive, and the trunks of oaks of an immense size are still to be seen. Planting is prosecuted, and large additions have been in progress for many years. The deer forests of Ross are forty-eight in number, and extend over 835,545 acres, and the shootings are a source of profit to the proprietors. The improvements effected in farming have completely changed the aspect of the district of Easter Ross.

The chief crops, as appears from the "Agricultural Statistics of Scotland, 1914," are: Oats, 29,922 acres; barley, including bere, 10,090; wheat, 1,622; rye, 361; the total corn crops being 41,995 acres; turnips and swedes, 15,234 acres; potatoes, 6,670; mangolds, 28; cabbage, 89; rape, 45; vetches or tares for seed, 73; vetches, tares, beans, mashlum &c. for fodder, 358; total green crops, 22,497 acres; rye-grass and other rotation grasses and clover (for hay), 12,947 acres; pasture (not for hay), 32,295. Total area of land, 1,977,248 acres; the mountain and heath land being 882,004; permanent grass, 29,166; arable land, 110,139; woods and plantations, 58,781.

The live stock in 1914 comprised: 5,526 horses used solely for agriculture and brood mares; stallions, 24; unbroken horses, one year and above, 1,195; under one year, 544; cows in milk, 14,837; in calf, but not in milk, 1,807; heifers in calf, 1,271; other cattle, two years and above, 7,220; one year and under two, 9,276; under one year, 9,337; ewes kept for breeding, 113,961; other sheep, one year and above, 53,904; under one year, 98,549; sows kept for breeding, 580; other pigs, 3,477.

AGRICULTURAL HOLDINGS:—Above 1 and not exceeding 5 acres, 3,469; above 5 and not exceeding 15 acres, 2,310; above 15 and not exceeding 30 acres, 415; above 30 and not exceeding 50 acres, 210; above 50 and not exceeding 75 acres, 113; above 75 and not exceeding 100 acres, 87; above 100 and not exceeding 150 acres, 106; above 150 and not exceeding 300 acres, 135; above 300 acres, 83; total, 6,958.

The mineralogy of the shire is interesting to the geologist, but of little commercial value. Sandstone occurs in several localitites, 3,149 tons being raised in 1913, and 4,500 tons of gravel and sand.

The salmon fishery is carried on to a considerable extent in the different rivers and estuaries, and that for herrings has of late years become uncertain. At Ullapool in 1913 there were 326 boats registered under the "Merchant Shipping Act, 1894," requiring 1,137 men and boys to work them. The number of fishermen (men and boys) resident within the limits of the port was 993. There are no manufactures of any importance, but in the neighbourhood of Dingwall, Invergordon and Tain several extensive distilleries are established.

Rivers, Lakes and Railways.—The principal rivers on the east side of the county are the Conan, fed by the Orrin, Meig, Sheen, Farnich and Blackwater, which flows into the Cromarty Firth, and the Aultgraat and Alness, which have the same outlet, and the Oikel and the Carron, which pass into the Dornoch Firth. The river Ewe, on the west coast, has a short course from Loch Maree, and the Broom river falls into Loch Broom. The Conan and its principal branch, the Raney (or Blackwater), form some falls of considerable height and beauty. The indentations of the sea, or saltwater lakes, on the west coast proceeding from north to south, are Loch Enard, Loch Broom, Loch Grienord, Loch Ewe, Gair Loch, Loch Torridon, Loch Keeshorn, Loch Carron and Loch Alsh, with its inner southerly arm, Loch Duich. The county likewise possesses a great number of lakes of fresh water in the interior, but none of them save Loch Maree, near the west coast, are of much magnitude or beauty. The Highland railway enters the county at Beauly in the south-east, runs north to Dingwall, whence a branch passes west-by-south round the north of Loch Luichart, up the Sheen water and along Glen Carron to the south part of Loch Carron, where Kyle of Lochalsh is the terminus, and from thence the steamers of the Company sail to the Isles of Skye and Lewis; the main line continues from Dingwall along the north side of the Cromarty Firth to Invergordon, whence it turns north to Tain and by the south of Dornoch Firth to Culrain, where it leaves the county and proceeds to Golspie &c.; from the Dingwall and Kyle of Lochalsh section is a short line to Strathpeffer, and from Muir of Ord on the main line is a branch to Fortrose; the scenery through which the line passes is very fine and varied; there is also a short branch from Dingwall to Strathpeffer Spa.

Lewis has some mountains, 1,200 to 1,700 feet, in the south and south-west portion of that section of the island, also an inland loch, Langabhat, about 8 miles long, and numerous inlets or "sea" lochs, the largest being Loch Boag on the west coast. There is a good harbour at Stornoway, sheltered from the north-east by the Eye peninsula. The principal industry is sheep breeding.

Divisions, Representation &c.—The county contains 33 entire and parts of 2 civil parishes and 42 entire and parts of 3 ecclesiastical parishes: it has three royal burghs, namely, Dingwall, Tain and Fortrose, one municipal borough, Cromarty and two police burghs, Invergordon and Stornoway. Dingwall, Tain and Cromarty join with Wick in Caithness-shire, Kirkwall in the Orkney Isles and Dornoch in Sutherlandshire, to form the Wick district of burghs, returning one member to Parliament, and the shire of Ross and Cromarty sends another. The parliamentary constituency numbered in 1915, 8,618. The burgh of Fortrose is associated with Inverness, Nairn and Forres in parliamentary representation.

ALNESS is a parish in the eastern half of the county, and a small village, partly in this parish and partly in that of Rosskeen, 3 miles south-west from Invergordon and about 10 from Dingwall, situated on both sides of the Averon (which river separates the two parishes), the part of the village lying in Rosskeen parish being known as Bridge End of Alness. The parish is bounded on the east by Cromarty Firth and Rosskeen, on the south and west by Kiltearn, and on the north by Rosskeen, and is about 20 miles in length, with a mean breadth of about 5 miles. There is a station here on the Inverness and Wick section of the Highland railway. Alness is in the Dingwall small debt court district, and Bridge End in that of Tain. There are Established and United Free churches about half a mile west of the village, and the latter has lately been rebuilt at a cost of £1,100. The production of whisky is carried on extensively in two distilleries. Iron and silver ores have been found in this neighbourhood. Teaninich House is the seat of Colonel John Winston Thomas Munro-Spencer, and Dalmore, that of Andrew Mackenzie esq. J.P. The Right Hon. Ronald Craufurd Munro Ferguson G.C.M.G., D.L., J.P., S. C. Munro esq. and C. W. Dyson Perrins esq. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 44,060 acres; rateable value, £7,057 (including railway, £7,186); population of the parish in 1911, 898.

ANNAT, see APPLECROSS.

APPLECROSS is a parish and small village about 16 miles north-west from Strome Ferry station on the Dingwall and Skye section of the Highland railway, and about the same distance from Lochcarron. The parish, which is in the small debt court district of Dingwall, and measures about 25 miles by 23, lies between Loch Torridon on the north, and Lochcarron on the south, and is bounded on the west by the Inner Sound, dividing it from Raasay Island, and on the east by the parishes of Gairloch and Lochcarron; its largest loch is Loch Damph, 4 miles in length; there are several detached hills varying from 2,000 to 2,936 feet above sea level, and the parish is well watered by small streams. The climate is very moist, torrents of rain being frequent all the year round. At Applecross are Established and United Free churches. There is a good limestone quarry on Applecross Bay, but the population is chiefly engaged in fishing. The greater part of the parish is occupied as a deer forest by Lord Middleton, the Earl of Lovelace, James Buchanan esq. and Charles James Murray esq. D.L. Shieldaig, a village in this parish, has Established, Free Presbyterian, and United Free churches. Torridon, another village including the townships of Annat and Fasag, and Croulin Island is also included in it, but part of the original parish has been transferred under boundary order 129 to Lochcarron parish, and part of Lochcarron to Applecross. At Torridon is a United Free church. Charles James Murray esq. D.L. Lord Middleton, James Buchanan esq. and the Earl of Lovelace are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 109,282 acres; rateable value, £4,385; population in 1911, 1,440, including 10 on Croulin Island, in the civil parish and 712 in the ecclesiastical parish.

CROMARTY

CROMARTY is a contributory parliamentary burgh, seaport and small parish at the entrance to the Cromarty Firth, an inlet of Moray Firth. The town, which stands on a promontory on the south side of the strait leading into the fine harbour formed by Cromarty Firth, is situated 19½ miles north-east from Inverness, 17 north-west from Nairn, 11 south from Tain, 9 north-by-east from Fortrose, 7 east, by water, from Invergordon, a station on the Inverness and Thurso section of the Highland railway, and 10 from the terminus of the Inverness, Muir of Ord and Fortrose railway. The harbour, formed by the Cromarty Firth, is one of the safest on the East Coast, the entrance being well protected by two headlands, known as the North and South Sutors; it was known to the Romans as the "Portis Salutis," and is capable of holding a large fleet, and the bay presents good facilities for bathing. The herring and white fishery is carried on to some extent in this quarter. In 1913 about 193 fishing boats of 1,756 tonnage were engaged in the Cromarty district, giving employment to 696 men and boys. The total value of the fish landed was about £8,930. The burgh is controlled by a provost, two bailies and six councillors. The parish church, built in pre-Reformation days, stands at the east of the town: the records of the Kirk session date from 1671. There is also a United Free church and an Episcopal church. The Town Hall, an ancient building, in Church street, contains an old bell believed to be one of the many captured by Sir Charles L. Ross, of Balnagown, during the French war, and presented to several northern towns. In the burgh is a good public hall, erected by the inhabitants of Cromarty as a drill hall and place for entertainments. There are branches of the Bank of Scotland and the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited. Beneath the South Soutor is a chasm, called 'Charlie's Seat,' and a petrifying stream called the "Dropping Cave." Near the North Soutor are several sunken rocks, termed the "King's Sons," so named from the tradition of three kings' sons having been drowned near these rocks when on their way from Denmark, and to their memory were erected three obelisks, one in the parish of Nigg and two in the parish of Fearn. On an eminence immediately behind the town is a column 10 feet high, surmounted by a full-sized figure, to the memory of the late Hugh Miller (d. 1856), the eminent geologist, and author of the "Testimony of the Rocks," who was a native of Cromarty. Mr. Handyside Ritchie, of Edinburgh, was the sculptor, and the monument was erected by public subscription in 1860, at a cost of £1,500. In the house in which Hugh Miller was born, 1802, is a small museum of fossils &c. Cromarty was anciently a royal burgh, but was disfranchised by an Act of the Scottish Privy Council, in compliance with the solicitation of Sir John Urquhart, a former proprietor of the estate of Cromarty; it now joins with Kirkwall, Wick, Dornoch, Tain and Dingwall in returning one member to parliament. The present proprietor is Gen. Walter Charteris Ross C.B., J.P. of Cromarty House. The area of the parish comprises 8,018 acres; burgh, 139 acres; rateable value, burgh £2,820; landward £5,105; the population in 1911 was 5,637, of which 1,928 were in the burgh, and including 3,999 men of the Royal Navy.

The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1915 was 177.

DINGWALL is the county town of Ross and Cromarty, and a parish, royal burgh and market town, 178 miles north-north-west from Edinburgh, 21 north-west from Inverness, 20 south-west from Cromarty, 13 south-west from Invergordon and 9 north from Beauly, with a station at the junction of the Inverness and Thurso and Dingwall and Kyle of Lochalsh sections of the Highland railway. The town consists chiefly of one main street and several smaller ones, and is situated in the eastern part of Ross-shire, on a fertile plain near the western extremity of the Forth of Cromarty, which is navigable at high water for light craft as far as the town, and about three-quarters of a mile from the town is a pier or jetty, for vessels discharging their cargoes or taking in freight. Dingwall was erected a royal burgh by Alexander II. and its charter was renewed by James IV.; it is governed by a provost, two bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer and ten councillors, and joins with Wick, returning one member to parliament. Cromarty, Tain, Dornoch and Kirkwall in Water is supplied from springs above the town and gas from works in Tulloch street, and the town is also lighted by electricity from works at Glenskaich. It is supposed that at some remote period Dingwall was much more extensive than at present, as causeways and foundations of buildings have been found some hundreds of yards from the site of the present town. With the exception of a distillery, there are no manufactories or large works. The Town House, near the centre of the burgh, was entirely rebuilt, with the exception of the tower, in 1905. The Carnegie Free Library, adjoining the Town House, was erected in 1903. In the High street are branches respectively of the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the Bank of Scotland, Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited and the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited. The Established church is a plain structure on the north side of the town. Near the church is an obelisk, 57 feet in height, erected in 1703 to Sir George Mackenzie bart. and first Earl of Cromartie, who died 17 Aug. 1714, and, in accordance with his last injunction, was buried here. The Episcopal church, in Castle street, originally built in 1797 and rebuilt in 1872 after being destroyed by fire, contains several fine stained windows and a handsome organ; it affords 128 sittings, and has attached St. Anne's Mission church at Strathpeffer. The Roman Catholic church, in the same street, dedicated to St. Lawrence, was opened July 29, 1902. The old Free church, in the same street, is now occupied as offices by the "Ross-shire Journal" newspaper. The new Free church, built by the late Rev. Dr. John Kennedy, is in High street; it is a handsome edifice, and has seats for 1,000 people. The United Free church, erected in 1909, in Castle street, has 500 sittings. The Free Presbyterian church is in Greenhill terrace. The Ross Memorial Hospital, in Ferry road, is a small stone building, erected in 1873. A little to the east of the town stand the County Buildings, completed in 1845, at a cost of £5,000, and containing a county room, a sheriff court room and county clerk's and other offices, together with a prison; here the County Council meet. On Mitchell hill is a square tower, of Mediæval character and 100 feet high, erected as a national memorial to the late Brig.-Gen. Sir Hector Archibald Macdonald K.C.B., D.S.O., A.D.C. (d. 1903), whose birthplace is within a few miles of Dingwall, at a cost of about £3,000, and inaugurated May 23rd, 1907, by the Marquess of Tullibardine M.V.O., D.S.O. A memorial cross of pink granite has been erected at the top of High street by the officers, non-commissioned officers and men, past and present, of the Seaforth Highlanders (Ross-shire Buffs), The Duke of Albany's Regt. to their comrades who died in South Africa 1899-1902. There is an extensive distillery owned by the Fertintosh Distillery Co. Limited. Tulloch Castle is the seat of Duncan Davidson esq. D.L., J.P. The market is held every Wednesday. Duncan Davidson esq. Col. James Alexander Francis Humberston Stewart-Mackenzie D.L., J.P. and William Dalziel Mackenzie M.A., D.L., J.P. are the principal landowners. The area of the parish is 6,465 acres; burgh, 452 acres; rateable value of the burgh, £14,018, and of the landward portion of the parish, £4,254; total, £18,307; the population of the parish in 1911 was 2,898, including 2,639 in the burgh. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911 was 2,942. Under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 65, a part of Dingwall parish has been transferred to Fodderty.

The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1915 was 455.

FORTROSE is a small town and royal, police and contributory parliamentary burgh and quoad sacra parish out of the civil parish of Rosemarkie; it is 10 miles north from Inverness, 21 south from Tain and 18 north-north-east from Beauly, situated on the southern slopes of the Black Isle, on the north side of the inner part of the Moray Firth, nearly opposite to Fort George, from which it is distant 2½ miles. In November, 1893, a branch line of the Highland railway was opened, commencing at Muir of Ord, and having its terminus at Fortrose, which has advantages for sea-bathing. James II. in 1445 united the town in burghal privileges with the neighbouring village of Rosemarkie, under the name of Fort-Ross, which has since been softened down into Fortrose. It reverted to the Crown at the Reformation, and was in consequence enfranchised and erected into an independent royal burgh in 1590, and again annexed to Rosemarkie in 1592 under the name of the Royal Burgh of Fortrose. The burgh is now governed by a provost, three bailies, a dean of guild and nine councillors; and it joins with Inverness, Forres and Nairn in sending one member to Parliament. The Bishopric of Ross was founded by King David I. between the years 1124 and 1128, but in 1762 was united to Caithness, and in 1769 to Moray, and is now part of the consolidated diocese of Moray, Ross and Caithness, formed in 1864. The cathedral here, dedicated to St. Peter and St. Boniface, is an edifice of red sandstone, in the purest form of the Decorated style, and consisted, when entire, of choir with aisles, nave of four bays with aisles, western tower, quasi-transepts, lady chapel, crypt and chapter house, but the only portions now standing are the south aisle of the chancel and nave and the detached chapter House: in the aisle are several ancient tombs of the 14th century, and a piscina. There are Established, United Free and Free churches. The Episcopal church of St. Andrew, built in 1828, affords 190 sittings: the rectory, net value £155, has been held since 1885 by the Rev. Canon Spence Ross. Attached is the Mission station of Cromarty. The town has an excellent harbour, built by the parliamentary commissioners, and a jetty about 150 yards in length, erected at a cost of £3,000. There is a branch of the Bank of Scotland in the town, which depends for its prosperity on agriculture and fishing, and its advantages as a summer and seaside resort. The area of the royal burgh is 523 acres; rateable value, £5,12-; population in 1911, 959; ecclesiastical parish, 583. The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1915 was 178.

INVERGORDON is a police burgh and seaport town in the parish of Rosskeen and Eastern district of the county, 12 miles south-south-west from Tain, 13 north-north-east from Dingwall and 4½ west from Cromarty, with a station on the Inverness and Thurso section of the Highland railway; it lies on the northern point of the entrance to the inner or narrower portion of Cromarty Firth. There is steamer communication from the town to Cromarty and a pier was erected in 1821 at the expense of the county and the Government, so that boats could land their passengers at any time of the tide. The late proprietor, R. B. Æ. M'Leod esq. of Cadboll, at his own expense constructed a harbour in 1828. In 1857 and later dates, large wooden piers were built extending several feet further into the channel, and which admitted of the steamers plying with Leith, London &c. coming alongside; the extension, however, of railway communication to the town in 1863 has diverted a large proportion of this traffic. The bay is very commodious and safe, and has good anchorage. The burgh is governed by a provost, two bailies and six councillors. The United Free church is a handsome cruciform edifice, with a tower and spire about 140 feet in height. In High street there are branches of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited and the North of Scotland Bank Limited. The Town Hall, also in the High street, opened in April, 1871, is a building in the Italian style with a pediment displaying a figure of Neptune, accompanied by various symbolical sculptures. The Y. M. C. A. Naval Institute, in Outram street, erected at a cost of about £4,500, was opened in April, 1915, and consists of a large dining room, social room with two billiard tables and social or concert hall, kitchen and scullieries and 50 cubicles. The manufacture of hemp was once carried on in this town, but the principal industry at present is a bone crushing and manure manufacturing establishment, which together with the timber yards give employment to a number of workpeople. The principal hotels are the "Commercial" and "Royal," in High street. In 1861 the town was taken under the provisions of the Lindsay Police Act. The area of the burgh is 99 acres; rateable value, £3,836; population in 1911, 1,051.

POOLEWE is a fishing village and a quoad sacra parish formed from that of Gairloch: the village is 64 miles west from Dingwall, about the same distance south-east from Stornoway and 35 north west from Achnasheen station on the Dingwall and Skye section of the Highland railway, and is situated at the head of a fine bay called Loch Ewe. According to an inventory from the title deeds in the possession of the Gairloch family, the old name for the village of Poolewe was Clive. In 1610, a charter of registration in favour of the then proprietor was granted under the great seal, erecting Clive, on the water of Ewe, into a burgh of barony, and the harbour of Ewe into a free port, with power from year to year of electing a provost, bailies, besides other privileges, but it does not appear that any use was ever made of this charter. Since the opening of the Dingwall and Skye railway, there is regular communication by daily motor cars now from the hotel at Achnasheen station to Kinlochewe, Gairloch, Poolewe and Aultbea. There are Established, United Free and Free Presbyterian churches. Poolewe is part of the estate of Gairloch, the present proprietor being Sir Kenneth J. Mackenzie bart. D.L., J.P. At BUALNALUIB is a school, erected and endowed by Francis Harford Mackenzie esq. and now a board school. Loch Maree, about 2 miles distant, is about 13 miles in length and from 3 to 4 in breadth, and abounds with fish: this lake contains about 30 islands, from one of which, called Maree, the water takes its name; some of these are but little raised above water level and are covered with scattered firs and with thickets of birch, alder and holly, while they are separated by narrow sinuous channels: the northern margin of the loch presents a variety of scenery, consisting of rocky and wooded bays and creeks, crowned by overhanging cliff and mountains. A fine view of the loch, embracing nearly its whole length, is obtained at Tollie, about two miles from Poolewe. Loch Maree is in part the property of Sir Kenneth J. Mackenzie bart. and the Marquess of Zetland K.T., P.C. The river Ewe, which is scarcely 2 miles in length, falls into Loch Ewe, and is the natural outlet of Loch Maree; the river has a rapid and turbulent course, and is noted for the abundance of its salmon. On a small island off the eastern shore of the lake are the ruins of a chapel, said to date from the 8th century, and in the rough burying ground in which it stands are several ancient tombstones, incised crosses and other carvings; here also is a consecrated well, whose waters are reputed to be a cure for insanity, and by it an aged tree, on which have been affixed the miscellaneous offerings of pilgrims and supplicants. Inverewe is the residence of Osgood Hanbury Mackenzie esq. D.L., J.P. Area, 200,646 acres; the population of the quoad sacra parish in 1911, 1,556.

ROSEMARKIE is a parish and village in Black Isle poor combination and in the small debt court district of Dingwall, about 1 mile from Fortrose terminal station on a branch from Muir of Ord of the Highland railway and about 18 east from Dingwall. Rosemarkie and Fort George in Inverness-shire are connected by a ferry. The parish extends for 9 miles along the coast of the Moray Firth, and is 3 miles in breadth. The hills both on the north and south are for the most part arable, being in summer covered with verdure, and producing early and abundant crops. The coast all along between Rosemarkie and Cromarty is romantic, being bold and rocky, and as the country lies dry and has the benefit of fine sea breezes, the air is pure and salubrious. The parish church, completed in 1821 and renovated in 1897, is in the Late Gothic style. James Douglas Fletcher esq. D.L., J.P. Robert Logan esq. and the trustees of the late Mrs. Crosbie are the principal landowners. The area of the parish is 6,694 acres; rateable value, landward, £4,039; burghal (Fortrose), £5,129; the population in 1911 was: landward, 339, Fortrose burgh, 970; the population in the ecclesiastical parish in 1911 was 726, including 35 inmates and 4 officials in Black Isle Combination Poorhouse.

ROSSKEEN is a parish and village in the eastern district of the county, bounded on the north by Kincardine and Elderton, on the east by Kilmuir Easter, on the south by the Firth of Cromarty, and on the west by Alness; the length of the entire parish is about 20 miles with a breadth varying from 3 to 5 miles. The lower part of the parish, which runs along the Firth, and for about 2 miles back, forms a gentle and easy access to the hills. The town was supplied with gas in 1872. The parish church, situated one mile west of the town of Invergordon, is a substantial building, erected in 1827, with 1,200 sittings. There are also United Free and Free churches. Fairs are held on the third Tuesday in April, the first Tuesday in August, the second Tuesday in October and the third Tuesday in December. A hill called Knock-Navie, or Coldhill, divides the lower from the higher part of the parish. Beyond the upper arable ground and inhabited glens is a very considerable range of mountains, applicable to no other purpose than that of pasturing sheep. The parish possesses some fine plantations, the chief of these belonging to the Ardross estate and Invergordon Castle. About 1 mile from the town of Invergordon is Invergordon Castle, the seat of Capt. Roderick Willoughby Macleod D.L., J.P. of Cadboll. In November, 1801, the centre of the mansion was accidentally destroyed by fire, but was rebuilt in 1873-4 on the old site in the Elizabethan style; in the park are some fine plantations. Ardross Castle is the property and residence of C. W. Dyson Perrins esq. F.R.A.S., J.P. Capt. R. W. Macleod D.L., J.P. of Cadboll, Charles Alexander Gillanders esq. the trustees of the late Roderick Mackenzie, C. W. Dyson Perrins esq. and Andrew Mackenzie esq. are the principal landowners. Acreage, 33,734; rateable value, landward, £11,575 (including railways, £12,008); burghal (Invergordon), £5,948 (including railways, £6,203); population in 1911 was 3,362; of this number 1,051 were returned for Invergordon.

SALTBURN, 1 mile east from Invergordon, is a hamlet in this parish.

STRATHPEFFER is a modern village 4½ miles west from Dingwall, in the parish of Fodderty, and the terminus of the Strathpeffer branch of the Highland railway. There is also a station at Auchternecd, 2 miles north, on the Kyle of Lochalsh branch of the same line. The village has Established, Free and United Free churches, and also the Episcopal Mission church of St. Anne's, which seats 500 persons. Here also is a branch of the Bank of Scotland. Strathpeffer Mineral Wells are at the upper extremity of a fertile valley of that name, which stretches about 6 miles due west from Dingwall. In the summer months many people suffering from gout, rheumatism &c. visit these wells; numerous villas for invalid visitors have been erected near them and there are three good hotels and three temperance hotels, and many of the adjacent farmhouses likewise furnish lodgings during the season from May to September. The springs rise through the shaly sandstone which is prevalent in the district, and at no great distance from the lofty mountain Ben Wyvis, one of the most conspicuous eminences in the North of Scotland, having an altitude of 3,429 feet. From the summit views may be obtained of the counties of Ross, Sutherland, Caithness and Inverness. The waters have long been known as medicinal, and an analysis of their composition was published by Mr. Donald Munro in the "Philosophical Transactions" for 1772. They were brought into considerable celebrity by Dr. Morrison, of Aberdeenshire, who affirmed that they were the strongest and most salubrious in Great Britain. They have subsequently been visited by Dr T. Thompson, in May 1828, who analysed the water, which is strongly charged with sulphuretted hydrogen gas. Large additions have been made to the spa establishment, which consists of a pump room, hot and cold baths a pavilion and reading room. Strathpeffer is bounded on the north by a high sandstone ridge, and on the south it is skirted by the steep green wooded acclivities of Knock-Farrel, one of the most extensive and best preserved vitrified forts (or ancient beacon hills) in the country. The public road bounds the grounds of Castle Leod, a castellated mansion and the seat of Lieut.-Col. E. W. Blunt-Mackenzie D.L., J.P. The same road, on quitting the strath, runs by the wooded knolls of Coul, the property of Sir Arthur G. R. Mackenzie bart. D.L., J.P. and the manse, village and island plain of Contin, beyond which are the shores of Loch Achilty and the sheepwalks of Comrie, to the cascades of the Conon, or, holding more to the north, the falls of Rogie, on the Blackwater, which flows from the upland lake and moors of Strathgarve. Nearer to the mineral spa is a walk through the lawns and pleasure grounds of Braham Castle. The population of the village in 1911 was 425.

STROME FERRY, see LOCHALSH.

TAIN, a royal, police and contributory parliamentary burgh and a market town, is a parish in Easter Ross, and has a Union Combination Poorhouse for that district. The town has a station on the Highland railway, and is 46 miles north from Inverness and 26 north-by-east from Dingwall, occupying a gentle acclivity about a mile from the Firth of Dornoch across which arm of the sea ferries have been established. The ancient Gaelic name of the town is Baile Dhuthaich bood beach, signifying "The pretty town of St. Duthic" (or Duthus), to whom the old church and chapel in the parish had been dedicated. A rich agricultural district surrounds the town, which is old and irregularly built, but has received considerable improvements and additions. The parish extends 8 miles along the south shore of the Dornoch Firth, by a breadth of 4 miles inland, and is bounded on the north by the Dornoch Firth, on the south by Logie Easter, on the east by Fearn and on the west by Edderton. The ground in general is flat, but towards the west is rather hilly: the district is tolerably well wooded and much improved by agricultural operations. The sea shore is flat and sandy. As a royal burgh, it is governed by a provost, three bailies, a dean of guild, treasurer and nine councillors, and unites with the northern district of burghs in returning one member to Parliament. A sheriff small debt court is held every Wednesday during session, and a justice of peace court every Thursday fortnight. The church of the Establishment is a quadrangular structure, with an embattled tower at each angle; it was renovated and reseated in 1896, at a cost of £700, and reconstructed in 1903 at a cost of £800, when a new organ and carved oak pulpit were provided. The United Free church was erected in 1892, at a cost of £6,000. There are also a Free Presbyterian and Free churches. The Episcopal Mission church of St. Andrew will seat over 100 persons: attached to it is a Mission church at Dornoch and Tarbat House private chapel at Delny; the Rev. Angus Cameron has been priest in charge since 1905. The old chapel of St. Duthus, standing below the town near the railway station, was built about 1200; to this edifice Robert the Bruce's queen and her retinue fled for refuge, but were taken captive by the Earl of Ross and delivered up to the English. The chapel, founded by Thomas, Bishop of Ross, in 1428, is an elegant structure, and was used as a parish church until 1815, but was afterwards left unprotected for upwards of 40 years, and remained in a dismantled condition until its restoration in 1877 by Mr. John M'Leod, then provost of Tain, and afterwards by his son, George M'Leod, in 1882: it contains some stained windows in memory of families in the district, and monuments to Thomas Hogg and Patrick Hamilton, the Scottish martyrs, and likewise a replica of a finely carved oaken pulpit, presented to the people of Tain by the "good regent" Murray. St. Duthus enjoyed a great reputation as a saint, and in the 15th century many pilgrimages were made by royal and other personages to his shrine in Tain: these included James IV. who travelled hither with unusual expedition, resting only a short time by the way at the monastery of Pluscardine, and on his arrival bestowed upon the town of Tain extensive grants of land with other immunities: the inhabitants, hearing of his approach, constructed a hasty roadway over a peat moss within a few miles of the town, which is still called "the King's Causeway." The Royal Academy, in an open park at the west end of the town, was founded by royal charter in 1809, and opened in 1813, the cost of its erection having been raised by subscription: the Academy is conducted by a rector, who is classical master, and assistants. The Court House, previous to 1833, was used as a place of confinement for debtors, but in April of that year it was destroyed by fire, when three persons perished in the flames; the present Court House, erected on the old site, retains the ancient tower and burizan. In the town is a large hall for assemblies and public meetings, and a good hotel called "The Royal." The Masonic Hall, in Manse street, was opened in March, 1896, and cost about £600. The Town Hall, a handsome building, has been reconstructed and decorated at the cost of Andrew Carnegie esq. of Skibo Castle, who also in 1903 established a Free Library. The trade here consists principally in the woollen manufacture and in distilling. There are branches here of the British Linen Bank, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the Bank of Scotland and North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited and a savings bank. The principal corn and cattle markets are held every alternate Friday. In the year 1895 the ancient "Mercat cross" was restored by the late James Vass M.D. sometime provost. Loch Eye, 3½ miles south-east from the town, is well stocked with trout, and near it are the ruins of Lochslin Castle. There is a golf course of 18 holes, and a bowling green with a pavilion attached. Captain Roderick Willoughby Macleod D.L., J.P. ex-provost Fowler and Count De Serra Largo are the principal landowners. The area of the civil parish is 16,843 acres; area of burgh, 550 acres; rateable value of the landward portion, £5,962; of the burgh, £7,899; total, £13,861; population in 1911 was, royal, police and parliamentary burgh, 1,599; civil and ecclesiastical parish, 2,507.

The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1915 was 324.

INVER and Inver-Skinnerton form a village, principally in Tain parish, but partly in that of Tarbat.

ULLAPOOL is a seaport and fishing village and quoad sacra and parliamentary parish, erected from the civil parish of Lochbroom; it is in the small debt court district of Dingwall, but justice of the peace courts are held in the village, which is 61 miles west-by-north from Inverness, 45 north-west from Dingwall and 30 north-east from Poolewe; it is situated on the north shore of Loch Broom, about 5 miles from the mouth, and is 32 miles north-west from Garve station on the Dingwall and Skye section of the Highland railway. It was begun under the auspices of the British Fishery Society in 1788, and has gradually increased since that period. It possesses a spacious and excellent harbour, and there is a good quay, erected in 1915. Steamers sail regularly to Stornoway, in Lewis, and to Glasgow. There is an Established church, and a branch of the National Bank of Scotland Limited. The herring fishery is the main dependence of its inhabitants; shoals of this fish appear on the coast of Loch Broom as early as May, but they do not enter the lochs and arms of the sea so as to be of benefit to the inhabitants until the month of September, when their appearance is anxiously looked for and great preparations made to profit by them: when the shoals set fairly in, and remain in the lochs and bays, the number taken is very great, and of the very best quality. Ullapool, in the season, is attended from all parts of the east and west coast by curers, and during this period the place presents a very animated appearance. The number of fishing boats registered under Part IV. of the "Merchant Shipping Act, 1894," as belonging to the port, December 31, 1913, was 326, aggregating 1,237 tons, requiring 1,237 men and boys to work them. The number of fishermen (men and boys) residing within the limits of the port in 1913 was 993. The late Hugh Mackenzie esq. of Ardross and Dundonnell, opened up new roads in various directions. Ullapool is the property of Major Duncan Matheson, of Lewis Castle, Stornoway, and is visited in summer by sportsmen from all parts to enjoy the fishing and shooting. There are two hotels, the "Royal" and "Caledonian," the former having a small grouse shooting attached, and visitors to both hotels have the privilege of free trout fishing on the river Ullapool. The Drill Hall is also used for meetings. The population of Ullapool Parish Ward in 1911 was 1,140, ecclesiastical parish, 1,786.

Post, M. O. & T. Office (letters through Garve, Ross-shire); John Stewart, postmaster. URRAY is an extensive parish, in the small debt court of Dingwall, 15 miles in length and 9 in breadth. The village stands on the road from Inverness, Beauly and Garve, and is about 2 miles west from Muir-of-Ord station on the Highland railway, 5 south from Dingwall and 3¼ north from Beauly, and has Established, Free and United Free churches. The rivers Orrin and Meig both have their source in the western part of the parish, and are confluent with the Strath Garve at its eastern extremity. Scour Ruddh Mountain, 3,251 feet high, is on the Inverness-shire border, and Scour Vuillin in the northern part of the parish. Under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 65, parts of Contin and Fodderty, in this county, and of Kilmorack parish, in Inverness-shire, have been transferred to Urray. Brahan Castle, the ancient residence of the Seaforth family, is the property and residence of Col. James Alexander Francis Humberston Stewart-Mackenzie D.L., J.P. of Seaforth. This beautiful seat is situated above the river Conon, and commands an extensive and varied prospect, comprehending the partially wooded and cultivated courses of the river Conon and Orrin. ROXBURGHSHIRE

THIS county, lying on the south-eastern border of Scotland, is bounded on the north-east, east and south-east by the county of Northumberland and by a small corner of Cumberland, south and south-west by Dumfriesshire, west by Selkirk and Edinburghshire and north by Berwickshire; the shape of the county is extremely irregular, and it measures from its extreme point on the south to that part which is inserted between the counties of Berwick and Edinburgh upwards of 40 miles; and from east to west, near the centre, about 30 miles. The area of the shire contains 426,028 acres of land and 2,437 of water. The county is divided by its waters into several districts, of which the chief and largest is Teviotdale, being that division drained by the Teviot and its tributary streams; this district comprehends about 500 square miles. Liddesdale, which forms the south-west corner of the county, comprehends the Alpine territory, which is drained by the Liddle and its tributaries, and contains 120 square miles. The third division lies between the Gala and Leader streams, measuring 26 square miles; and the fourth, which is situate north of the Tweed, is included in "the Merse," and comprehends 27 square miles. The population in 1901 was 48,804, and in 1911, 47,192, viz.:—males, 21,583; females, 25,609. The inhabited houses in 1901 were 10,815, and in 1911, inhabited 11,324, uninhabited 842, and building 33. In size Roxburgh is the twelfth and in population the sixteenth of the counties of Scotland.

Early History &c.—The earlier traditions assign this part of Caledonia to the Gadeni and Ottadinii, and after being occupied by the Romans, as remains of forts, camps and roads show, from A.D. 79 to 410, it fell into the joint possession of the Strathclyde Britons on the west, and the Bernicians on the east, to whom succeeded in 573 the kings of Northumbria, then embracing the country between the Forth and Humber and across from the North Sea to the Wigtownshire coast: to this period belongs St. Boisil, the head of the monastery at Old Melrose, after whom the town of St. Boswells is named. This county shared the shifting fate of the Northumbrian kingdom up to 954, when it was reduced to an earldom, and in the next century Malcolm Ceanmmor got back the present border counties for Scotland, and in or about 1157, under Malcolm IV. the border line was definitely settled, and from that time forward this border county had to bear the burden of the various disputes between the sovereigns of the two kingdoms. In 1215 John burnt Roxburgh, and in 1292 the English Court of King's Bench sat at Roxburgh, and early in the 13th century Edward II. held court in the same town, and a little later the English burnt Dryburgh Abbey; in 1460 Roxburgh, which had been held by the English for 50 years, was recaptured by the Scots and dismantled. In 1566 Queen Mary held a court at Jedburgh and rode thence to Hermitage Castle to see her favourite, Earl Bothwell. In 1715 the Highlanders held Kelso for a few days on their way into England, and in 1745 Prince Charles stayed a night at Kelso. The district is intersected by Roman roads in various directions, and another class of antiquities belonging to the county are towers or castles—among them the castle of Jedburgh, that of Roxburgh and Hermitage Castle (in Liddesdale). The district was likewise famed for its religious edifices, which included the abbeys of Jedburgh, Melrose and Kelso.

Surface, Soil, Produce, Manufactures &c.—The southern part of Roxburghshire is very mountainous, and throughout the whole territory there is little land absolutely flat. The following are the principal hills, with their respective altitudes above the level of the sea:—Cheviot, 2,682 feet; Auchopecairn, 2,382; Chill Hill, Millenwood Fells and Windhead Fells, each 2,000; Tudhope Fell, 1,830; Carter Fell, 1,602; Meggs Hill, 1,480; Ruberslaw, 1,392; Eildon Hills, 1,330; Dunnian, 1,021; Minto Hills, 858, and Minto Craigs, 649. The soil of the county is various, and much of it exceedingly fertile: in some parts a rich loam, in others gravel and clay; the heavy clayey soil occupying the higher grounds, while loam occurs near the beds of rivers and rivulets. In Liddesdale there is much mossy land. It has been ascertained that so early as the 12th century the district produced great quantities of corn, and the amount of barley then ground at the mills exhibited the progress made in this branch of commerce. Under the intelligent monks the agriculture of the county arrived at considerable perfection; and they introduced the knowledge of horticulture. Apples and pears are cultivated in the orchards of Melrose, Jedburgh and Kelso. Excellent crops of wheat, barley and oats are now grown, as are also potatoes, peas, beans and turnips, the latter serving as food for the great numbers of sheep and cattle that are reared, and for the disposal of which large stock sales are held at Hawick, Kelso and Newtown St. Boswells.

The chief crops in 1914, as appears from the "Agricultural Statistics for Scotland," are:—Oats, 26,457 acres; barley, including bere, 11,794; wheat, 528; beans (to be harvested as corn), 149; the total corn crops being 38,928 acres; turnips and swedes, 19,794 acres; potatoes, 1,353; mangolds, 74; cabbage, 187; rape, 547; vetches, tares, beans, mashlum &c. 302; total green crops, 22,157; hay from rye-grass and other rotation grasses and clover, 8,622 acres; pasture (not for hay), 41,686 acres.

The area of the county is 426,028 acres, of which 222,990 acres is mountain and heath land used for grazing, 65,700 acres permanent grass, 111,603 acres arable land and 16,655 woods and plantations.

The live stock in 1914 comprised: 3,227 horses used solely for agriculture and brood mares; stallions, 20; unbroken horses, 528; cows in milk, 3,984; cows in calf but not in milk, 374; heifers in calf, 538; other cattle, two years and above, 6,040; one year and under two, 5,447; under one year, 3,632; ewes kept for breeding, 213,640; other sheep, one year and above, 75,682; under one year, 251,040; sows kept for breeding, 483; other pigs, 2,456.

AGRICULTURAL HOLDINGS:—Above 1 and not exceeding 5 acres, 232; above 5 and not exceeding 15 acres, 261; above 15 and not exceeding 30 acres, 88; above 30 and not exceeding 50 acres, 78; above 50 and not exceeding 75 acres, 61; above 75 and not exceeding 100 acres, 60; above 100 and not exceeding 150 acres, 69; above 150 and not exceeding 300 acres, 186; above 300 acres, 204; total, 1,239.

The mineralogy is neither valuable nor varied. Between the years 1700 and 1770 coal was discovered in the hill called Carter Fell, in this county, near the borders of Northumberland, but though wrought for some time it was ultimately abandoned; another seam was subsequently found near the south-eastern portion of Liddesdale, from which little benefit has been derived beyond that detached district. Various attempts have been made to find coal in different places in the county, but the inhabitants are still supplied from Dumfriesshire, Edinburghshire, or Northumberland. The only minerals raised in 1913 were gravel and sand, 550 tons, and igneous rocks, 25,102 tons. In 1913, 14,890 tons of coal were used in the manufacture of coke, producing 5,978 tons, at gas works only. The manufactures of Roxburghshire do not vary much. The staple of the county is the woollen trade, the seats of which are at Hawick, Jedburgh and Kelso, where flannels, blankets and tartans, woollen cloth, lambs' wool yarn and hosiery are extensively produced. The salmon fisheries of the Tweed are of consequence and yield handsome rents.

Rivers and Railways.—The principal streams of Roxburghshire are as follows:—the Tweed, which enters the county near the influx of the Ettrick and winds through the vales of Melrose and Kelso, and in a course of 30 miles receives the Gala, the Allan, the Leader, the Teviot and the Eden. The Teviot, which falls into the Tweed nearly opposite to Kelso, after passing through a vale to which it gives name, and in a course of from 30 to 40 miles receives the Borthwick, the Ale, the Slitterick, the Rule, the Jed, the Oxnam and the Kealie waters, with many subsidiary streamlets. The Liddle rises in and runs through the parish of Castletown; it gives the name of Liddesdale to a division of the county, and for a distance of 4 or 5 miles forms the boundary with England. The streams tributary to the Liddle are the Hermitage, the Tweeden, the Tennis, the Kershope and the Blackburn. The Tyne and Coquet rivers rise in this county, and entering England, fall into the sea at Tynemouth and Coquet Isle. The lochs are small and few in number, the principal being Yetholm Loch, which is about a mile and half in circumference. The railway system is in the hands of the North British company, and comprises a line from Carlisle, which, entering the county at Kershopefoot station, passes through Hawick and St. Boswells Junction, and leaves the county at Bowland station, a little south-west of Lauder, on the Waverley route to Edinburgh; this has branches from Riccarton Junction to Saughtree, and thence to Hexham and Newcastle; from St. Boswells to Kelso, via Roxburgh, from which place a branch goes to Jedburgh; a second branch goes from St. Boswells to Earlston, Duns and Berwick, and a line from Melrose to Falkirk; and the North Eastern railway has a branch from Berwick-on-Tweed, via Coldstream, to join the North British at Kelso.

Division, Representation &c.—The county comprises 29 complete and part of one civil parishes, and has 37 ecclesiastical parishes and parts of 4 others, all contained in the synod of Merse and Teviotdale and presbyteries of Kelso, Jedburgh, Earlston and Selkirk, except Castleton, which is in Langholm presbytery synod of Dumfries; it contains only one royal burgh, Jedburgh; one municipal burgh, Hawick, and two police burghs, Kelso and Melrose. Jedburgh, previous to the passing of the "Redistribution of Seats Act, 1885," joined with Haddington, Dunbar, North Bewick and Lauder in returning a member to Parliament, but was then merged in the county. The parliamentary constituency for 1915 numbered 6,140.

ANCRUM is a parish and village in Jedburgh poor combination and small debt court district, 5 miles in length by 3 broad, and bounded on the south-east for about 5 miles by the river Teviot, west by Minto and Lilliesleaf, north by St. Boswells and north-east by Maxton and Roxburgh. The village is pleasantly seated on the right bank of the water of Ale, about a mile above its junction with the Teviot, 2½ miles west from Jedfoot Bridge station on the Roxburgh and Jedburgh branch, 4 east from Belses station on the St. Boswells and Hawick section of the North British railway, 11 south-west from Kelso, 11 north-east from Hawick and 4 north-west from Jedburgh. There are Established and United Free churches. At a short distance east of the village stood Ancrum Castle; opposite to which, in the face of a perpendicular rock, are some caves, supposed to have been places of retreat in the troubles of former ages. In the early part of the last century the banks of the Teviot and Ale, at this spot, were the favourite haunt of the poet Thomson, author of "The Seasons," and one of the caves is still pointed out as a spot to which he frequently retired, and is called "Thomson's Cave." Wm. Buchan M.D. the celebrated author of "Domestic Medicine," issued in 1770, and other medical works, was born in this village in 1729, and died 25 Feb. 1805. Part of the Roman road that led from York to the banks of the Forth passes through the north corner of the parish, and the remains of a Roman encampment are discernible. Monteviot House, situated in a large park, is the residence of the Marchioness of Lothian. Chesters is the residence of Mrs. T. E. Ogilvie; Kirklands is the residence of Capt. Lord George William Montagu-Douglas-Scott. Ancrum House, the residence of Miss C. E. Scott, stands in a delightful position, and commands some picturesque prospects. The trustees of the late Sir William M. Scott bart. (d. 1902) are lords of the manor, and Sir George Brisbane Douglas D.L., J.P. and the Marquess of Lothian are the principal landowners. The population of the parish in 1911 was 968; acreage, 10,302; rateable value, £12,648.

Longnewton is a hamlet in this parish.

CAVERS is a parish in Hawick poor combination and small debt court district; it is of very irregular figure, and is about 13 miles long by about 2½ to 3½ broad, bounded on the west by Teviothead and Hawick, north-west by Minto, east by Jedburgh and Hobkirk, and south by Castleton. The church is about 2½ miles east from Hawick station on the North British railway, and there are also United Free and Evangelical Union churches. Shankend station on the Riccarton Junction and Hawick section of the North British railway is in the southern part of the parish, and near the station the line crosses the Longside brook by a viaduct. Maiden Paps Mountain, 1,677 feet high, is at the southern extremity of the parish. Cavers House, situated in a small park, is the property of Captain Edward Palmer-Douglas D.L., J.P. lord of the manor and principal landowner, but is now the residence of Major John Fyfe Jameson. The area of Cavers with Kirkton is 24,465 acres; rateable value of Cavers, including Kirkton and Denholm, £18,300; the population in 1911, 1,297 civil (including 52 military) and 1,000 ecclesiastical.

DENHOLM is a small village in the parish of Cavers, 1¼ miles south-west from Hassendean station on the Hawick and Melrose and Kelso sections of the North British railway, 6 miles south-west from Jedburgh, and 5 north-east from Hawick, pleasantly seated on a small plateau, shelving abruptly to the right bank of the Teviot, which is here crossed by a stone bridge erected in 1864. The village was much improved some years since, at a considerable expense, by the late James Douglas esq. of Cavers, and has a United Free church. There is a subscription library in the village, and a horticultural society was formed in 1849. John Leyden M.D. physician and poet, was born here in 1775, and a monument has been erected to him in the centre of the village green. The upper part of the district is hilly and pastoral, while the lower declines into rich arable fields.

KIRKTON, or Kirktown, formerly a parish, has been, under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1894" (57 and 58 Vict. c. 58), added for civil purposes to Cavers, but still remains a separate parish for ecclesiastical purposes, and has an Established church. It is 3 miles south-east from Hawick, and is in Hawick small debt court district. Capt. Edward Palmer-Douglas and the War Office are the principal landowners.

EDNAM (or Elenham) is a parish and village in Kelso poor combination, and in the small debt court district of Kelso, bounded on the north-east by Berwickshire, south-east by Sprouston, south-west by Kelso and north-west by Stichill. The village is pleasantly seated on the small river Eden, about 3 miles north-east from Kelso station on the North British railway. Here is an Established church. Ednam was the birthplace, 11 Sept. 1700, of the poet James Thomson, author of "The Seasons," his father having been incumbent of the parish; he was educated in Jedburgh for the Church, but came to London in 1725 and published the poem "Winter," which was succeeded by "Summer" in 1727, by "Spring" in 1728, and in 1730 by "Autumn," and among other works was the "Castle of Indolence;" he died 27 Aug. 1748; a monument erected to the poet stands on an eminence near the village, and there is also one in Westminster Abbey. The Rev. Henry Francis Lyte, author of "Abide with me" and many other beautiful hymns, was also born here. The land of the parish ranks among the finest in this fertile district, and is exceedingly well cultivated and enclosed. This place affords the title of Viscount to the Ward family, Earls of Dudley. Sir Richard John Waldie-Griffith bart. D.L., J.P. who is lord of the manor, and W. A. Macfarlane-Grieve esq. M.A., F.S.A. are the principal landowners. The area is 3,846 acres; rateable value, £6,929; population in 1911, 495.

GALASHIELS, a parliamentary burgh and parish, formerly partly in this county, has been, under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), transferred wholly into Selkirkshire.

HAWICK is a manufacturing town, a free burgh of barony, police and parliamentary burgh, head of a poor combination and parish, 50 miles south-by-east from Edinburgh, 20 south-west from Kelso, 11 south from Selkirk and 45 north from Carlisle, on the high road between the last-named city and Edinburgh, on the Waverley route of the North British railway, for which there is a station not far from the centre of the town. This burgh, together with Galashiels and Selkirk, forms the Hawick parliamentary district, constituted in 1868, and returning one member. The town is seated at the confluence of the Slitrig with the Teviot rivers; by the former stream it is divided into two parts, which are connected by three stone bridges. The village of Wilton, on the north bank of the Teviot, is now included within the burgh boundaries, the river being spanned by two stone bridges, one re-erected in 1865, and several foot bridges. From its approximate position to the border of the two kingdoms, Hawick generally suffered severely from the incursions of the English, and was more than once burnt: one of the most destructive conflagrations occurred in 1570, when it was set on fire by the English under Sir Thomas Ratcliffe K.G. 3rd Earl of Sussex. The present town consists chiefly of one long line of streets, from which other thoroughfares diverge on the right bank of the Teviot; and on the left, or Wilton bank of the river, of another continuous line of streets, with minor thoroughfares extending from it. The environs of Hawick are much admired, the banks of the Teviot being extremely picturesque and delightful. The great increase of manufacturing establishments, together with the erection of extensive mills, and the enlargement of others, have conduced to the increase of the population.

The town is generally well paved and lighted with gas and electric light supplied by private companies; the water supply was in 1865 considerably increased by the introduction of the stream of the Allan, a mountain burn which joins the Teviot 5 miles above the town, and this was supplemented in 1881 by a supply from Dodburn in the same locality, at a total cost of about £32,000. A thorough system of drainage has since been carried out at a cost of £28,000. Hawick is a burgh of barony, independent of the lord of erection, and appears to have existed free from a very early period; but the documents of the burgh having been either lost or destroyed during the inroads of the English borderers, a charter was granted in the year 1537 by James Douglas, 7th baron of Drumlanrig, confirming to the burgesses such rights and lands as they formerly possessed; and in the month of May, 1545, this was confirmed by another charter, granted by Queen Mary. Under these grants the burgesses annually elected their magistrates, consisting of two bailies and two representatives of each of seven incorporated trades, who, with fifteen councillors (elected for life), managed all the municipal affairs of the town. In 1861, the inhabitants, with the concurrence of the existing Town Council, made application to Parliament for a reform of the municipal constitution, and the result was an Act which considerably extended the burgh boundaries, and provided that the councillors should be elected as in royal burghs, and have the whole management of the town property. The town is now divided into five wards, each of which returns three councillors, who retire by rotation. The council elect a provost, four bailies, a treasurer and town clerk, and, besides acting as cus odians of the burgh property, exercise all the functions of commissioners of police. The provost and bailies are justices of the peace during their tenure of office. An efficient police force is established and a court for petty offences is held daily; the justice of peace court being held as required, and a sheriff's court is held on Wednesdays for the disposal of civil and criminal cases. There are five Established churches, seven United Free churches, Baptist and Congregational churches, and a Roman Catholic church: the Episcopal church of St. Cuthbert, built in 1858, will seat 375 persons: the rectory, net value £300, has been held since 1911 by the Rev. Alex. James Hay M.A. of King's College, Aberdeen. The Town Hall and Municipal Buildings were rebuilt in 1885-7, at a cost of £15,000. The Public Free Library, in North Bridge street, opened May 17, 1904, was presented to the burgh by Andrew Carnegie esq. LL.D. of Skibo Castle, Sutherlandshire, at a cost of £10,000; it contains 25,000 volumes, and a reading room. The Buccleuch Memorial Science and Art Institute was built by public subscription in 1886, at a cost of about £3,000, including a grant of £800 from the Science and Art Department; it is now used as a Technical college. The Exchange is a large and handsome building, erected in 1865. A combination poorhouse was built in 1857, at a cost of £4,000, to hold about 103 inmates. There are two Masonic Halls in the burgh: Lodge St. John's, No. 111, which received its charter in 1768, and Lodge St. James's, No. 424, which had its charter granted in 1863, and occupies a new hall in Union street. The Teviotdale Farmers' Club was established in 1859. The West Teviotdale Agricultural Society, established in 1835, holds an annual exhibition of live stock. In the town are branches of the British Linen Bank, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the National Bank of Scotland Limited and the Royal Bank of Scotland. One of the principal hotels here, called "The Tower," in the Market place, was a fortress, belonging to the superior of the burgh, and the only building not destroyed by the forces of Lord Sussex; at a later period it was the frequent residence of Anne, Duchess of Buccleuch and wife of James, Duke of Monmouth K.G. executed in 1685.

Hawick ranks as one of the most considerable manufacturing and trading towns in the south of Scotland. There are two branches of the woollen manufacture—hosiery and Scotch tweeds, and for the production of both the town enjoys a fair reputation. The market is held on Thursday, and there are auction sales of stock on alternate Mondays, and at the special sales during the summer as many as 200,000 to 250,000 lambs are occasionally sold. The fairs are held on the first Thursday in March, the 17th of May and the 8th of November; any of these days happening on Saturday, Sunday or Monday, the fair is held on the following Tuesday. A tryst is likewise held in October for the sale of horses, and a wool fair on the first Thursday after St. Boswell's fair in July. The town is noted for its great annual festival known as "the common riding," which has been regularly celebrated without intermission for at least three centuries; according to tradition, some young men of the town, in the year after the battle of Flodden (1514), having surprised a party of marauding English during the night, about 2 miles below the town, and slain the greater part of them, took possession of their colour. A fac-simile of this colour or ensign is now borne on the occasion of the "common riding," by an unmarried man of the burgh, elected for the purpose, and called the "cornet," who accompanies the authorities in procession round the lands belonging to the town, of which a grant was made from the Laird of Drumlanrig, as a reward for the valour displayed in obtaining the standard. In 1914 an equestrian statue was erected, at a cost of about £1,300, to celebrate the quater-centenary of the above-mentioned incident. The estate known as Wilton Lodge was purchased by the Town Council and laid out as a public park at a cost of £14,000, and opened in May, 1890; in the park is a monument erected in honour of the men of Hawick and district who fell in South Africa during the Boer War, 1899-1902, and unveiled by the late Field-Marshal Earl Roberts K.G., V.C. Aug. 22, 1903. The Duke of Buccleuch is lord of the manor and principal landowner. Hawick parish, now including Wilton parish, comprises an area of 14,872 acres; burgh area, 842 acres; rateable value: burgh, £84,510; landward, £16,255; the population of the civil parish, including Wilton, in 1911 was 18,021 (including 46 inmates and 3 officials in the combination poorhouse); of the wards—first or North High street, 3,808; second or South High street, 4,166; third or Slitrig, 2,604; fourth or Teviot, 3,245, and fifth or Wilton, 3,054; total, 16,877.

The population of the ecclesiastical parishes in 1911 was: Parish church, 4,564; St. John's, 5,120; St. Margaret's, 1,704; St. Mary's, 3,179.

The number of electors on the Hawick parliamentary register in 1915 was 2,934, and Hawick District of Burghs, 6,389.

WILTON, which forms part of the burgh, has now, under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1894," been amalgamated for civil purposes with Hawick, and is in Roxburghshire for parliamentary purposes. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911 was 3,754.

JEDBURGH

JEDBURGH is a royal burgh, the county town, the seat of a presbytery, the head of a poor combination and a parish, 56 miles south-east from Edinburgh (by Lauder), 10 south-by-west from Kelso, the same distance north-east from Hawick and 12 north from the English border: a branch of the North British railway from Roxburgh terminates here after crossing the Jed, and has two stations, one near the river called Jedfoot Bridge, and the other in Jedburgh, which is situated on the left bank of the Jed, the name of which river, with "weorth," the Saxon name for hamlet, formed its ancient appellation of "Jedeworth," or "Jedworth": in the course of time it became perverted to its present designation, but through a very extensive district in the south the old name is partly retained by pronouncing it "Jeddart," or "Jethart," names which are almost exclusively used by the common people. Under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 123, a part of Oxnam parish has been transferred to Jedburgh and part of the latter parish annexed to Oxnam. The town, which stands on the declivity of a hill, and surrounded on every side by others of considerable height, is in general well built, and consists of four principal streets which cross each other at right angles, and form a square or market place in the centre. The streets and principal shops are lighted with gas. Electric light has also been supplied to the town by a company since 1903, and there is an excellent water supply. The river Jed, which takes its rise in the Carter, one of the hills of the Cheviot range, and runs along the south-east side of the town, is crossed by no fewer than seven bridges within a mile. In recent times Jedburgh has been greatly improved, and many buildings have been erected. Jedburgh is a burgh of very ancient erection, and, from a charter granted by William the Lion, appears to have been a place of note previous to 1165. It has the honour of parochial precedency, being the oldest parish in Scotland of which any historical record has been transmitted to posterity. Prior to the Union it was a place of importance, and one of the principal towns in the south of Scotland. The burgh is governed by a provost, three bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, and a council elected by the constituents resident within the burgh. The lords justiciary and lords commissioners of the jury court hold courts here for the south circuit (which includes the counties of Roxburgh, Berwick and Selkirk), generally in April and September, and the sheriff holds a court on Thursday for the dispatch of civil and criminal business, and a small debt court and the ordinary sheriff court is held on the same day: the justices of the peace hold their court when required, and here also the court of general quarter session sits. The burgh formerly joined with Haddington, Dunbar, North Berwick and Lauder in returning one member to Parliament, but under the "Redistribution Act, 1885," it is now merged in the county. There is an Established church, three United Free churches, a Roman Catholic church and a Baptist chapel. The Episcopal church of St. John the Evangelist, built in 1843, will seat over 190 persons. The County Building was erected in 1811, and the Public Hall in 1900. The Gaol and Bridewell, designated the "Castle," from its occupying the site of the ancient fortress, though no longer used as a prison, is a good embattled structure, and from its elevated situation affords a delightful view. The manufacture of tweeds, blankets, plaidings &c. is carried on to a large extent, and in the neighbourhood are several corn mills. Considerable trade is derived from the orchards and gardens that surround the town. The market is held on Tuesday, and fairs on the first Tuesday in March, 16th May if Tuesday, if not the Tuesday preceding, first Tuesday after 26th May, 20th July (or two days after St. Boswell's), 20th August if Tuesday, if not the Tuesday preceding, 25th September, and servants' hiring first Tuesday in November. Golf Links were opened near the town in October, 1893; the course is a nine-hole one and extends over a mile and a half.

Jedburgh Abbey, the principal architectural and antiquarian object of attraction in the town, stands between the houses and the river, and was founded for canons regular by David I. about the year 1118 or 1147: although for the most part in a ruinous condition, it still exhibits an outline of its original magnitude and magnificence; the principal parts now remaining are the nave of nine bays, 130 feet long, nearly the whole of the choir, with the south aisle, the centre tower 90 feet in height, and the north transept, which is the burial place for the Kerr family, Barons Jedburgh and Marquesses of Lothian: the lofty west front is divided into three portions by pilaster buttresses, the great door being round-headed and deeply recessed; above is a two-light Pointed window, and a marigold window in the gable: in February, 1286, Alexander III. was married here to his 2nd wife, Yolande, daughter of the Count de Dreux: at various periods the buildings have suffered by fire in the many conflicts of early times, and in 1559 they were reduced entirely to ruin; the structure has, however, since received considerable repairs. Hartrigge House, which stands in a large park, is the seat of Lord Stratheden and Campbell J.P.,

D.L. The Marquess of Lothian is the principal landowner in the parish. KELSO

KELSO is a burgh of barony, police burgh, market town, the head of a poor combination and parish, 52 miles south-east from Edinburgh, 10 north-north-east from Jedburgh, 23 south-west from Berwick-upon-Tweed, 60 north-by-east from Carlisle and 6 west from the English border; it is connected with the North British railway from Hawick and Melrose and the North-Eastern railway from Newcastle and Berwick, by branches which approach within a mile of the town; it occupies an extensive plain on the north bank of the Tweed and opposite to the confluence of that river with the Teviot, and is surrounded on all sides by a delightful amphitheatre of wood-clad hills. Kelso is a place of very great antiquity, and has been the scene of many memorable events in early history: its border situation subjected it to the almost continual incursions of enemies: it was damaged in 1522, 1542 and 1544, and subjected to several desolating conflagrations, especially in 1686 and 1738: the town consists of a spacious central square, from which diverge four principal streets. The bridge which crosses the Tweed was built in the beginning of the 19th century, at a cost of about £18,000, after a plan by the late Sir John Rennie, the architect of Waterloo Bridge, London, of which it may be said to be a copy: it consists of five arches of equal span, and about 200 yards above it occurs the confluence of the Tweed and Teviot. The town is lighted with gas, and is well supplied with spring and river water. The government is vested in a provost and two bailies and a body of town councillors, who derive their powers from the Scotch Burgh Police Act. There are two Established churches, three United Free churches, a Roman Catholic church and a Baptist chapel. The Episcopal church of St. Andrew, originally built in 1757 and rebuilt in 1868, will seat 314 persons: the rectory, net value £200, has been held since 1893 by the Rev. Walter John Clarke M.A. of Worcester College, Oxford. The cemetery is in Sheddon Park road. The Town Hall, on the east side of the square, erected in 1816, contains a portrait of an ancestor of the Duke of Roxburghe: in this hall periodical courts are held by the sheriff, justices of the peace and magistrates, as are also the meetings of the Town Council: in 1907 the hall was restored and renovated at considerable cost, and the rooms on the ground floor are now used as municipal offices. The Corn Exchange, which stands in the Wood market, is of much service to the farmers and merchants. The Public Free Library was opened in 1906, Dr. Andrew Carnegie contributing £3,500 toward the cost. There are also several other libraries, a museum and three public halls, and two news and reading rooms, an association called the Tweedside Physical and Antiquarian Society, and several benefit societies. The principal branches of business are comprised in an extensive manure and oil cake factory, an iron foundry, and carriage building and fishing tackle works; there are also many corn mills in the neighbourhood. The domestic trade of Kelso is also well supported. The weekly market, chiefly for corn, and in the winter months for store cattle, is held on Friday, and a market for fat cattle and sheep is held once a fortnight, on Monday. An annual fair takes place on the 5th of August. There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, and the British Linen Bank. The principal hotels are the "Cross Keys and the "Spread Eagle." Two newspapers, the "Kelso Mail" (established in 1797), and the "Kelso Chronicle" (in 1832), are published in the town. The Dispensary, founded in 1777, has been reorganised, and employs a nurse for the treatment of poor persons either within the institution or at their own homes: there is also a Cottage Hospital, founded in 1907. There is a society for educating poor children. Sheddon Park, at the east end of the town, was presented to the inhabitants by Mrs. Robertson, of Ednam House, in memory of her nephew, who perished in the search for Sir John Franklin, the arctic explorer. Steeplechases are held in the spring, on a course about a mile to the northward. On the north bank of the Tweed is Floors Castle, the princely residence of the Duke of Roxburghe K.T., M.V.O. originally erected in 1718, and surrounded by a noble park. On the south bank of the Teviot is Springwood Park, the beautiful seat of Sir George Brisbane Douglas bart. D.L., J.P. In the centre may be seen the ancient border castle of Roxburgh, with the Eldon Hills in the distance. Eden Hall is the seat of Capt. George Sholto Douglas.

The venerable remains of Kelso Abbey are entirely of the Transition Norman style, of which it is a splendid specimen; this mitred abbey of SS. Mary and John the Evangelist, was founded by David I. in 1128, and exhibits all the massiveness of Norman construction: the existing portion consists of the northern part of the west front, the transept, in more perfect condition, 76 feet by 23 feet, two bays of the choir and two sides of the central tower, which is 91 feet high and 23 feet square: the triforium and clerestory form continuous Norman arcades, supported by arches, these resting on heavy, low pillars, 7 feet in diameter: during the repairs of this monument of ancient ecclesiastical magnificence some years ago, the fragment of a bell was found, which is supposed to have been, when perfect, about 3 feet in diameter and one ton and a half in weight: Earl Henry of Northumberland, the founder's son, was buried here in 1152; James III. was crowned in the abbey 10 Aug. 1460, but in 1545 it was burnt by Sir Edw. Seymour, Earl of Hertford, and again burnt by Lord Hunsdon in 1570. The Highlanders under Macintosh spent a night in Kelso, and here proclaimed King James in 1715. Prince Charles Edward passed through the town in 1745. Broomlands is the residence of James Cospatrick Hepburn-Scott esq. and Sydenham House, that of Mrs. Parker. The Duke of Roxburghe K.T., M.V.O. is lord of the manor and principal landowner. Acreage of the parish, 5,466; burgh, 971 acres; rateable value, landward, £8,442; burghal, £26,497; population in 1901, 4,525, and in 1911, burgh, 3,982, viz.: Bridge street ward, 622; Horsemarket ward, 1,021; Roxburgh Street ward, 1,601; Woodmarket ward, 738, and landward, 489; included in the population was 30 inmates and 4 officials in Kelso Combination Poorhouse. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911 was 2,340.

MAXTON is a parish on the road between Roxburgh and St. Boswells, in Jedburgh poor combination and Duns small debt court district; it is about 4 miles in length by 3 in breadth, and lies in a rich agricultural district, bounded on the south-west by the Roman road Watling Street, which separates it from Ancrum, north by the river Tweed, which divides it from Berwickshire, and east and south-east by Roxburgh. In the village is a station on the Roxburgh and St. Boswells section of the North British railway, 6 miles west from Roxburgh and about 1½ from St. Boswells church. At Rutherford, a small hamlet in the parish, is also a station on the same branch, 3 miles east from Maxton. The parish church, which is the burial place of the Kers, of Littledean, has a Norman doorway at the west end. On the estate of Littledean, about a mile distant, are the remains of an old tower, once a strong fortification, and long the residence of the Kers. At Lilliard's Edge, on the boundary betwixt this parish and that of Ancrum, was fought, early in 1545, the famous battle between the Scots under Angus Arran and Scott of Buccleuch, and the English under Sir Ralph Evers and Sir Brian Latour, when the latter were totally routed with the loss of a thousand men slain and made prisoners. About half a mile north-east from Rutherford station is a rocky height overhanging the Tweed and known as "Ringley Hall," often used as a camp in the time of border feuds, by the hostile parties on both sides. The trustees of the late Col. Sir Edmund Antrobus bart. (d. 1915), the Earl of Ellesmere M.V.O. and Sir Henry William Ramsay-Fairfax-Lucy bart. who is lord of the manor, are the principal landowners. Acreage, 4,429; rateable value, £6,004; population in 1911, 380.

MELROSE

MELROSE is a police burgh and parish in Galashiels poor combination, bounded on the east by the Leader water, a feeder of the river Tweed; the town, a small and ancient place, is 36 miles south-by-east from Edinburgh, 12 north-west from Jedburgh, 7 north-east from Selkirk and 4 south-east from Galashiels, delightfully situated at the foot of the Eildon Hills, with a station on the North British railway. The town stands on the wooded south bank of the Tweed, which, about 2 miles west, receives the Allan and Gala waters. It is built in the form of a triangle, with small streets leading from the corners: in the centre stands the cross, a structure supposed to be coeval with the abbey, and some of the older houses have incorporated in their walls portions of stone carving, once forming part of its buildings. Buckholm Hill, 1,064 feet high, is in the parish. Previous to the abolition of hereditary jurisdictions, Melrose was a burgh of regality, and afterwards a free burgh of barony. In the beginning of 1895 it was formed into a police burgh under the "Burgh Police (Scotland) Act, 1892," including the village of Darnick, which joins Melrose on the west. It is governed by nine commissioners, including a provost and two bailies. A sheriff's small debt court is held four times a year, on the last Fridays of March, June, September and December. A justice of peace court is held on the first Wednesday of each month. There is an Established church, two United Free churches and a Congregational Union church: Roman Catholic services are held at the Ormiston Institute. The Episcopal church of Holy Trinity, built in 1849 and enlarged in 1900, will seat 272 persons; the rectory, net value £360, has been held since 1893 by the Rev. Philip Sydney Lockton M.A. of Oxford University. The Corn Exchange, in the Market place, includes a hall holding 400 people. The principal hotels and posting houses are the Abbey, the George and Abbotsford, and the King's Arms. The Ormiston Institute, erected out of a sum of £4,000 bequeathed by Mr. Charles W. Ormiston, of Melrose, comprises a library of about 600 volumes, reading and smoking rooms and a billiard room; the cost, including the furniture, amounted to £1,700; the remainder of the capital sum is held as an endowment fund: there is also a Masonic Hall. The Roxburgh, Berwick and Selkirk District Lunatic Asylum, about three-quarters of a mile from the town, at the foot of the Eildon Hills, and opened in May, 1872, was erected at a cost, including subsequent additions, of £155,000, and will hold over 440 patients: the building is beautifully situated, and with the grounds occupies an area of nearly 80 acres. At the west end of the town is a large pond. Skirmish hill, to the north of the town, was the scene of one of the last border frays of the district.

Melrose Abbey, the finest and largest of the great border abbeys, was founded by King David, in 1136, and colonised by Cistercians from Rievaulx, in Yorkshire: it was not consecrated until 1246, and after having been frequently burnt and pillaged in the many border frays, it suffered so much in 1322, when Edward II. gave it up to fire and sword, that it had to be almost rebuilt, and it is from this period that the present remains mostly date. The great church, standing in a meadow on the south side of the Tweed, between which and the church were the cloisters and conventual buildings, was 258 feet in length, the breadth of the nave being 69 feet, including the south chapels, and the choir was 28 feet in breadth; the transept, 137 feet in length, had eastern aisles: the principal entrance to the church seems to have been in the south transept: the existing remains consist of the south wall of the nave, or rather of the eight lateral chapels, each lighted by a fine four-light window; the windows, still retaining much of their tracery, are a principal feature of the ruins, which, though now roofless, have a more perfect appearance than many of their contemporaries: on the north side of the nave, the wall of the aisle adjoining the cloisters still remains, and is about half the original length of that side of the nave, and across the fourth bay, from the tower, extends the rood loft, on a somewhat heavy screen; further eastward is the western wall of the great central tower, which was 84 feet in height, rising one storey above the roof, and 44 feet square, machicolated and having angle turrets: the walls of the transepts with the southern gable remain; the great five-light window over the south doorway retains its tracery, and the doorway itself is a fine recessed pointed arch: of the chancel of two bays a great portion of the walls remain, as well as much of the window tracery: that of the great east window still entire, being a good example of Perpendicular work: two of the flying buttresses also exist, and two of the nave chapels retain their vaulting, and there is some over the altar: the clerestory is Perpendicular. The heart of Robert Bruce, and the body of King Alexander II. (1249), rest here, and here likewise were buried the remains of Earl William Douglas, "the dark knight of Liddesdale" (1353), and William Douglas, who died from wounds received at Poictiers, in 1384. There is a slab of black marble over the grave of St. Waldare, the second abbot (1158). Of the domestic buildings there are no remains. About 2 miles east from the town is the site of the still more ancient abbey of Old Melrose, founded in 664, and said to be the first abbey founded by the Culdees who settled in this part of the kingdom: all that remains, however, of this structure is a small ruin on a peninsula formed by the Tweed, whose banks at this point are lofty and wooded, varied with perpendicular rocks, jutting out into the river, and the spot commands a fine view of the Tweed valley.

Abbotsford, for many years the residence of Sir Walter Scott, and in fact created by him, lies 3 miles west from Melrose, on the south bank of the Tweed, just below its junction with the Ettrick, and is now very much as Scott left it; he bought the property in 1811, probably influenced in his selection by the fact that he was himself descended from the Haliburtons, of New Mains, on the same river at the other side of the parish. The house consists of a square tower, together with a series of gable-fronted buildings, the whole presenting a fine appearance from the river: on entering by a Gothic porch, the hall, panelled with oak, is reached, and from it a broad corridor, or gallery, hung with arms, targets and trophies, collected by Sir Walter, and including many Highland relics: on either side of this corridor are the drawing and dining rooms; the former, a fine saloon, containing many cabinets and specimens of old furniture, and the latter having on its walls a good collection of pictures, including several fine portraits: the chief remaining rooms are the breakfast parlour, in an angle overlooking the Tweed and the Yarrow, hung with a collection of water-colour drawings; the study, a small room, with a light gallery running round it, and opening from it is the library, a room 60 feet long by 50 broad, with a carved oak ceiling, and containing about 20,000 volumes. Around the house and grounds are many specimens of carved stonework, including the gate of the old Tolbooth of Edinburgh: the grounds were laid out by Sir Walter Scott, and comprise many seats placed so as to command the best views. Sir Walter died here 21 September, 1832, and was buried in the Haliburton vault. The nearest railway station to the house is Abbotsford Ferry, on the Selkirk and Galashiels line; the house is the property of the trustees of the Hon. Mrs. Mary M. wife of the Hon. Joseph Constable Maxwell Scott D.L., J.P. and is at present (1915) unoccupied: the house can be viewed on payment of a small charge. Eildon Hall, in this parish, is the property of the Duke of Buccleuch. Acreage of civil parish, 26,684; burgh, 489; rateable value, landward, £30,679; burghal, £16,373; population of the civil parish in 1911, 4,650, of which the town contained 2,166; population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911, 4,236. Included in the total population were 313 inmates and 45 officials in Roxburgh District Asylum. Under the provisions of the "Local Government Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 126, parts of the parishes of Earlston and Lauder, in Berwickshire, have been transferred to Melrose.

By the Galashiels Drainage and Burgh Extension Order Confirmation Act, 1908 32 acres of the parish of Melrose, then without population, were added to Galashiels burgh and transferred from the county of Roxburgh to Selkirkshire.

GATTONSIDE is a rural village, on the north bank of the Tweed, in the parish of Melrose, but 1 mile north of the town, communication with which is maintained by a suspension bridge, opened 26th Oct. 1826, and formerly subject to toll, but on Whit Sunday, 1885, the bridge was made toll free. The village is surrounded with orchards, and it is computed that a greater quantity of fruit is grown about this place than in any other part of the vale of the Tweed. There is a board school in the village.

DARNICK, a small village in Melrose parish, on the road leading to Galashiels, and now almost joined to Melrose town, was made part of the burgh of Melrose in 1895. Here is a Memorial Mission hall. In the centre of the village stands Darnick Tower, the ancient stronghold of the lairds of Darnick, and now the residence of Mrs. Forbes-Gordon.

NEWSTEAD is a small village in Melrose parish, but 1 mile east from the town, and also having a Mission hall; near it once stood the "Red Abbey."

BLAINSLIE is a small rural village in the parish of Melrose, at its northern extremity, on the Berwickshire border, and on the road from Earlston to Lauder, 4 miles north-by-west from Earlston station on the St. Boswells and Greenlaw section of the North British railway, and about 7 miles north from the town of Melrose.

MOREBATTLE is a parish, in Kelso poor combination and small debt court district, about 9 miles in length with a mean breadth of 4 miles, and bounded by Linton and Yetholm on the north, Eckford on the west, Hownam on the south-west, and the county of Northumberland on the south and east. The greater part of the land is hilly and pastoral, the low grounds only being arable. The Kale and Bowmont run through the parish, both waters affording excellent sport to the angler. The village, which is becoming a summer resort, and stands near the Kale river, is 5 miles east from Kirkbank station on the Jedburgh branch of the North British railway, 7½ south-east from Kelso, and 10 east-north-east from Jedburgh. The ancient and more correct mode of spelling the name is "Merebotle," which signifies "the dwelling place at the marsh." Here are Established and United Free churches. The vestiges of ancient camps and various ruins, particularly Whitton Castle and Corbet Tower, indicate this parish to have been the scene of frequent warfare. The Duke of Roxburghe K.T., M.V.O. is lord of the manor and principal landowner. Acreage of the parish, 22,429; rateable value, £10,561; population in 1911, 740.

NEWCASTLETON is a modern village in a large and mountainous parish formerly known by the name of "Castletown," but more generally by the popular title of "Liddlesdale," being in the vale of the Liddle water, and in Hawick poor combination and small debt court district. The village owes its rise to Henry, 3rd Duke of Buccleuch K.G., K.T. 1746-1812, and has superseded the old village which remains a little further up the vale; it consists principally of two long streets of houses, occupying a haugh on the right bank of the Liddle in the centre of the lower and more arable part of the district and on the road which proceeds up Liddlesdale; the station here, on the Riddings Junction and Hawick section of the North British railway, is 26 miles south-south-west from Jedburgh, 20 south from Hawick, and 10 north-east from Canonbie. In the parish there are also three stations on the North British railway, one at Steele, Road, 5 miles north from New Castleton, another at Riccarton Junction, 7 miles north, where the line from Newcastle-on-Tyne joins the Edinburgh section, and a third at Saughtree. The parish is upwards of 18 miles in length by 14 in breadth in the north, but only 3 miles at its extreme south point; it is bounded on the west by Dumfriesshire, east by Cumberland and Northumberland, and north by Southdean, Hobkirk, Cavers and Teviothead. There are Established and United Free churches and a Congregational chapel, and also an Established church at Saughtree. There is also a Mission hall, built in 1888, at a cost of about £1,100. The northern part is mountainous and bleak, but affords good pasture for sheep. On the east, near the head of the parish, rise the rivers Tyne and Liddle, in the midst of a vast bog, called "Dead Water," on account of its stagnant appearance. Through the centre runs the Hermitage, a feeder of the Liddle. Mineral springs, which are of considerable repute for their medicinal properties, exist at Flat, Lawston, Thorlies Hope and Tweeden, the last of which exhibits the various stages of the petrifying process. The banks of the river are covered with natural wood and extensive plantations, which afford an infinite variety of the most picturesque scenery. In the parish are four mountains, viz.:—Roan Fell, 1,862 feet; Din Fell, 1,735 feet; Cooms Fell, 1,609 feet; and Tinnis Hill, 1,326 feet high. Within the district are the ruins of no less than five churches, and many castles and fortified places; but the most remarkable object in Liddlesdale is the ancient castle of Hermitage, erected in the 13th century, by Comyn, Earl of Monteith, and one of the largest fortresses on the border. It has been repaired by the Duke of Buccleuch, and during the progress of the work several small pieces of cannon were found, and a gold ring, bearing the inscription "In Broaderlie Amite." There is a branch of the British Linen Bank in the village. The Liddlesdale Unionist Club, in South Hermitage street, is a fine building of stone, erected in 1898 by the Duke of Buccleuch, and comprises reading, card and billiard rooms. Fairs are held in April, May, September and November; some of them are for hiring servants. The Duke of Buccleuch is the principal landowner. The acreage of the parish is 67,909; rateable value, £25,005; population in 1901, 1,872, and in 1911, 1,934, of which the village contained 876.

ROXBURGH is a small village and parish, in Kelso poor combination and small debt court district, and is bounded by Makerstoun and Kelso on the north, Maxton on the west, by the Roman road, Watling Street on the south, and by Crailing and Eckford on the east. The village is a short distance west from Roxburgh station, on the North British railway, which is the junction of the line to Jedburgh, and 3 miles south from Kelso. Here is an Established church. The ruins of the once famous castle of Roxburgh crown a high mound, picturesquely situated in the narrow space between the Tweed and Teviot and about 2 miles from the site of the present village. Near the castle, and between it and the Tweed, stood the old burgh of Roxburgh, which has entirely disappeared; the castle was demolished by the Scots in 1460, after they had retaken it from the English, and the burgh having lost its protection gradually decayed. In a field near the parish church are the remains of a border tower, called "Wallace's Tower," but only the lower part, consisting of a stone vaulted chamber, is now intact. This fort was burned by the Earl of Hertford in his marauding expedition of 1545. The ancient fair of St. James of Roxburgh is still held annually, on Aug. 5th, on St. James's green, close to the site of the old burgh: it is mentioned in a charter of William the Lion to the monks of Kelso, and was for long the best known fair in the south of Scotland. Sunlaws, the seat of Brig.-Gen. Robert Scott-Kerr C.B., M.V.O., D.S.O., J.P. is in this parish. The Duke of Roxburghe K.T., M.V.O. is lord of the manor and principal landowner. Acreage, 7,714; rateable value, £10,803; population in 1911, 793 civil and 812 ecclesiastical.

HEITON is a village in the parish, and is on the road from Kelso to Jedburgh.

FAIRNINGTON is a district adjoining the Roman Causeway, and is owned by Henry Rutherfurd esq. J.P.

On the green at St. Boswells is held on the 18th of July one of the most important horse fairs in Scotland. This fair also attracts a large number of TEVIOTHEAD is a parish, in Hawick poor combination and small debt court district, 10 miles long and 8 miles broad, bounded on the north by Roberton and Hawick, Dumfriesshire on the south, on the south-east by Castleton and Cavers. The main road through the parish is the direct road from Edinburgh to Carlisle, from which Teviothead is distant about 35 miles. The parish church is about 10 miles south-west of Hawick station on the North British railway. This is a mountainous district, and famous for its breed of Cheviot sheep. As its name implies, this parish contains the source of the Teviot, and the Allan water, one of its tributaries, runs through the eastern part of the parish. Cauldcleugh Head mountain, 1,996 feet, and Wisp hill, 1,950 feet high, are in the parish, and on one of the hills stands a monument to Henry Scott Riddle, a former minister, and author of "Scotland Yet." In the churchyard here Johnnie Armstrong, of Gilnoctie, and his band were hanged by James V., and about 1897 a mural tablet was erected in the churchyard to commemorate this tragedy. The parish also contains the "Fair Dodhead," the scene of the Border Ballad of that title. There is a small public hall, erected in 1907. The Duke of Buccleuch, Samuel S. Steel esq. Capt. Edward Elliot and George Port are the principal landowners. Acreage, 31,487; rateable value, £8,503 1s. 6d.; the population in 1911 was 381.

YETHOLM parish, in Kelso poor combination and the small debt court district of Jedburgh, is bounded on the north-east and east by the English border, and divided into nearly equal parts by the water of Bowmont, an excellent trout stream. The surface is hilly, but covered with verdure, and is pastured by numerous flocks of sheep. Situated on the western boundary is Yetholm or Primside Loch, measuring nearly a mile and a half in circumference. There are considerable haughs (or meadows) on the banks of the Bowmont; the soil is good, and adapted for wheat. The parish comprises two villages, situate on either side of the Bowmont; that on one side, called Town-Yetholm, is 4½ miles west from Mindrum station on the Coldstream and Alnwick branch of the North Eastern railway, and about 8 south from Kelso, and has a United Free church; the other, designated Kirk-Yetholm, is about a quarter of a mile on the other side of the stream, and contains the parish church, an edifice of black stone, with white stone dressings, erected in place of an ancient thatched building. There is also a Public Hall and a Library. In the village of Town-Yetholm is a granite obelisk, erected in 1903 as a memorial to the late Major-General A. G. Wauchope C.B., C.M.G. of Niddrie, who was killed at Magersfontein, South Africa, in 1899, during the Boer war. A fine view of the vale of Bowmont is afforded from the street which runs up the hill, called "Steerough." The fairs formerly held at the villages are now discontinued, but an annual sheep show for shepherds' packs is held in October. The trustees of the late Maj.-Gen. Andrew Gilbert Wauchope C.B., C.M.G. and the Marquess of Tweeddale are the principal landowners. Acreage of the parish, 5,869; rateable value, £6,139; population in 1911, 755.

IS a small county in the south of the kingdom and considered one of the border counties; it is bounded on the north by Edinburghshire and the northern part of Roxburghshire, east by this latter county, south by Dumfriesshire and west by Peeblesshire; its form is irregular, and its extent is 27 miles from south-west to north-east, and 17 in breadth, exclusive of a small detached part on the east. Its area comprehends 170,793 acres of land. The population in 1901 was 23,356, and in 1911, 24,601—males 11,332 and females 13,269. The inhabited houses in 1901 were 5,301, and in 1911, 5,771, uninhabited 185, building 14. In size Selkirk stands as the twenty-sixth, and in population the twenty-eighth, of the counties of Scotland.

Early History.—This border county was formerly designated the "Sheriffdom of Ettrick Forest," from being in a great measure the vale of the Ettrick and its tributary streams, and from its being covered with wood. It was stocked with large herds of deer, and formed a favourite scene for the enjoyment of the chase by the Scottish monarchs. In many royal charters it is entitled "The Forest," and before regular sheriffs were appointed it was placed under the jurisdiction of a keeper, who generally held the office of constable of the King's Castle at Selkirk. Placed as it is between the eastern portion of the kingdom, where the influence of the Earls of Northumberland prevailed, and before them of the East Anglians and kindred tribes, and the western shires, where the Dalriadans and Strathclyde Britons held sway, it was much under the control of its stronger neighbours, and has less of a history of its own than a share of that of other shires: the Romans occupied it during their stay of 350 years, but have left few traces of their presence. A stupendous work of the Romanised Britons called the "Catrail," once a vast fosse, having a rampart on either side, constructed during the 5th century as a strong line of defence against the invading Saxons, belongs to a rather later period, and the central position of the county placed it beyond the direct routes of armies proceeding to either the east or west coast. About 1120 David I. at that time an earl and not having yet succeeded to the throne, founded a monastery at Selkirk, afterwards transferred to Kelso, but unlike Roxburghshire, this county contains few or no remains of ecclesiastical establishments, though it possesses a number of ruined "keeps," the seats of feudal strength.

Surface, Produce, Manufactures &c.—With the exception of a very narrow portion on its eastern side, the county may be said to be a continual alternation of hill and dale, and many of the eminences rise to a considerable height. The principal vales are those of the Ettrick and Yarrow, besides a portion of the vale of the Tweed and the Gala: from these valleys there shoot out many "cleughs" and "hopes," that run up for some distance between the heights. Around Galashiels and Selkirk the hills are now under cultivation, and wheat is raised at a considerable elevation above the level of the sea. In the upper valleys of Ettrick and Yarrow, tillage is confined to the haughs and low grounds contiguous. The principal mountains, with their altitudes, are:—Ettrick Pen, 2,269; the Wiss, 1,932; Elibank Law, 1,715; Brown Knowe, 1,718; Sauchie Law, 1,449; Hopehead, 1,697, and Black Knowe, 1,806. Great attention is paid to sheep farming and the improvement in the breed of sheep; this was stimulated by a Lord Napier, who betook himself to the vale of Ettrick and commenced farming. The shire is almost wholly stocked with white-faced sheep, except in a high tract of country towards the sources of its rivers, of which Hindhope, on the Ettrick, and Lawdhope, on the Yarrow, are the lowest points.

The chief crops in 1914, as shown by the "Agricultural Statistics for Scotland," are:—Wheat, 11 acres; oats, 4,312; barley, including bere, 375; beans, 4; the total corn crops being 4,702 acres; turnips and swedes, 2,493 acres; potatoes, 200; cabbage, 24; rape, 87; vetches, tares, beans, mashlum &c. 50; hay from rye-grass and other rotation grasses and clover, 1,164 acres; pasture (not for hay), 1,967 acres. The area of the county (exclusive of water) is 170,793 acres, of which 135,670 acres are mountain and heath land used for grazing; 13,964 permanent grass; 15,217 arable land and 5,410 woods and plantations.

The live stock comprised in 1914:—Horses, 708; cows and heifers in milk or in calf, 1,246; other cattle, 2,202; ewes kept for breeding, 82,471; other sheep, one year and above, 19,669; under one year, 81,489; and pigs, 396.

AGRICULTURAL HOLDINGS:—Above 1 and not exceeding 5 acres, 36; above 5 and not exceeding 15 acres, 46; above 15 and not exceeding 30 acres, 35; above 35 and not exceeding 50 acres, 16; above 50 and not exceeding 75 acres, 16; above 75 and not exceeding 100 acres, 15; above 100 and not exceeding 150 acres, 13; above 150 and not exceeding 300 acres, 28; above 300 acres, 35; total, 240.

According to the "Mines and Quarries General Report and Statistics" for 1913, the only mineral raised in that year was 528 tons of igneous rock. The manufactures, for which see Selkirk and Galashiels, consist in both towns of woollens, tweeds, tartans, shawls and hosiery, together with the tanning of leather and the dressing of sheep and lamb skins. There are also several engineering and machine making establishments.

Rivers, Lakes and Railways.—The county is well watered by the Ettrick, the Yarrow and the Tweed. The latter river, after draining Peeblesshire, intersects the northern extremity of Selkirkshire from west to east, running in a deep channel of 9 miles, when it is joined by the Ettrick, and, receiving the Gala, passes on to Roxburghshire and Berwick-on-Tweed, where it empties itself into the North Sea. The Gala cannot be counted as a river of this county; it takes its rise in the parish of Heriot, in the county of Edinburgh, and flowing through a portion of Roxburghshire, falls into the Tweed about a mile below Galashiels. The Yarrow has its source at a place called Yarrow Cleugh, near the rise of the Moffat water, in Dumfriesshire, and falls into the Ettrick 2 miles above Selkirk. The county has some small lakes, the chief being St. Mary's Loch, 13 miles south-west from Selkirk, about 3 miles long and less than one in breadth, and the Loch of the Lowes, about a mile in length and a quarter of a mile broad, lying at the head of St. Mary's Loch. The mileage of railway actually within this county is very small, consisting as it does of about 12 miles of the Edinburgh and Peebles section of the North British line from Galashiels, through the northern extremity of the county, leaving it near Heylee, and a short branch from Galashiels to Selkirk: this extent of railway being, however, in the centre of a system gives easy access to Glasgow, Edinburgh, Berwick-on-Tweed, Newcastle and Carlisle.

Divisions, Representation &c.—The county of Selkirk contains only seven complete and part of one (Melrose) civil parishes, and seven complete and five parts of ecclesiastical parishes. There is a combination poor house at Galashiels for paupers belonging to the parishes of Galashiels, Selkirk, Melrose and Yarrow. The only towns are those of Selkirk and Galashiels—the former a royal burgh, and these two join with Hawick in sending one member to Parliament. This county joins with Peeblesshire in returning a member to Parliament. The number of voters on the county parliamentary register in 1915 was 970.

CADDONFOOT is a parish in the Galashiels poor combination and presbytery and in the small debt court district of Selkirk. It was originally a quoad sacra parish, but in 1898 was formed into a civil parish by Secretary for Scotland's Order, No. 33, dated Dec. 17, 1897, and embraces parts of the civil parishes of Yarrow, Galashiels, Stow, Innerleithen and Selkirk, in the North Eastern division of the county. The village is 1 mile from Clovenfords station on the Peebles branch of the North British railway, and about 4 miles south from Galashiels station on the same line. The Established church here is a small edifice of stone. Torwoodlee House, which stands in a small park, is the seat of James L. Pringle esq. M.A.Oxon., J.P. In the parish is a fine golf course. ETTRICK is a large parish in the south-west part of the county, and in Selkirk small debt court district; it is 13 miles long by from 2½ to 10 broad, and is bounded on the west by Peeblesshire, south by the county of Dumfries, east by Roxburghshire and Kirkhope, and north by Yarrow. The centre of the parish is 20 miles south-west from Selkirk terminal station on a branch of the North British railway from Galashiels, and 18 north-east from Moffat terminal station on a branch from Beattock on the Lockerbie line of the Caledonian railway. The Established church here stands near the Ettrick water, and in the churchyard lies buried Francis, 10th Baron Napier and 1st Baron Ettrick, and sometime ambassador to St. Petersburgh, who died 19 Dec. 1898. There is also a Free church, serving for the two parishes of Ettrick and Kirkhope. The public hall, erected in 1909, will seat 160 persons, and contains a library. The Loch of the Lowes, about 1 mile long by about half a mile wide, is in the parish, which is also watered by several streams, the principal being the Ettrick water, a tributary of the Tweed, rising in the south-western extremity of the parish, near Ettrick Pen, and running through the centre, receiving in its course the Tema water, the Rankle, the Tushielaw, and several other burns. The Yarrow water, in the north-west of the parish, falls into St. Mary's Loch at the northern boundary. The parish is very mountainous, the highest peaks being: Ettrick Pen, 2,269 feet; Capel Fell, 2,223; Andrewhinney Hill, 2,220; Wind Fell, 2,180; Bodesbeck Law, 2,173; Bellis Craig, 2,046; Herman Law, 2,014; Ward Law, 1,951, and Muckle Knees, 1,929. Thirlstane Castle, which stands in a park over 1 mile long by a quarter of a mile wide, and near the Ettrick water, is the seat of Lord Napier and Ettrick. The Duke of Buccleuch, who is also lord of the manor, Lord Napier and Ettrick, and George Pott esq. are the principal landowners.

In the northern part of this parish, at CHAPELHOPE, a small hamlet at the head of the Loch of the Lowes, is a monument, erected to James Hogg, known as the "Ettrick Shepherd," who was born in Ettrick forest either in December, 1770, or January, 1772, and died at Altrive in the adjoining parish of Yarrow 21 Nov. 1835; he was first brought to notice about 1801 by Sir Walter Scott, who, in 1807, encouraged him to print a volume of his poems; this, and a prize gained from the Highland Society for an Essay on Sheep, induced him in 1810 to take up the role of author, and he published a good many poetical and prose pieces, the best being "The Queen's Wake" and "The Brownie of Bodsbeck"; this memorial consists of the figure of a border shepherd standing on a high pedestal, and at Ettrick Hall farm is another memorial, erected in 1898 by public subscription. Acreage, 42,456; rateable value, £8,614; population in 1911, 344.

GALASHIELS

GALASHIELS is a parliamentary burgh, market town and parish, and head of a poor combination, 31 miles south-south-east from Edinburgh, 18 east from Peebles, 6 north from Selkirk, 4 north-west from Melrose and 34 south-by-west from Berwick, with a station on the main line of the North British railway (Waverley route); there is also a station line to Selkirk, and one to Innerleithen and Peebles. The town stands on a kind of tableland on both sides of the Gala, about a mile above the confluence of that river with the Tweed. The Gala is crossed by six bridges, two being for foot passengers only. The parish of Galashiels was formed, in the early part of the 17th century, out of the two old parishes, Lindean, in Roxburghshire, and Boldside, in Selkirkshire, and was in both counties until, under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), it has been placed wholly in Selkirkshire. This parish, together with Hawick and Selkirk, forms the Hawick parliamentary district, constituted in 1868, and returning one member. It is governed by a provost, four bailies and nine councillors. The town is comparatively of modern erection, the oldest houses not having been built more than a century, whilst the greater number have not existed more than 50 years. The town consists of several streets, most of which run parallel with the river; there are also a large number of villas in the immediate neighbourhood, chiefly the residences of the manufacturers and merchants of the town. The Old, or High Town, as it is now called, contains the parish church, manse, and a few of the original houses, but has been much improved and enlarged. A small debt court is held in the town on the second Mondays of February, April and June, the last Monday of July, the first Monday of October and second Monday of December. The town is supplied with water by gravitation from Caddon Waters. St. Paul's Established church, in Scott crescent, is a fine edifice of red freestone, erected at a cost of £15,000, in the Gothic style, from designs by Messrs. Hay and Henderson. There are other Established churches at Ladhope and Kirkbrae. St. John's United Free church was erected in 1878 at a cost of £6,000, from the designs of Mr. Starforth, of Edinburgh. The Ladhope United Free church, erected in 1885, at a cost of about £5,000, is a building of whinstone, in the Early English Pointed style, with a tower and spire, from the designs of Messrs. M'Kissack and Rowan, architects, of Glasgow: there are also two United Free churches in High street, and one in Gala Park road, a Roman Catholic church, and Baptist and Congregational chapels. The Episcopal church of St. Peter, in Abbotsford road, built in 1853, will seat 440 persons; the rectory, net value £391, has been held since 1911 by the Rev. Pierce John Egan M.A. of Trinity College, Dublin. The Public Hall, erected by a private company, is a handsome building in High street, with a large hall on the upper storey used for public meetings and concerts. The Free Library, opened October, 1874, and maintained by the rates under the "Free Libraries Act," contains at present upwards of 10,000 volumes in almost every department of literature; the reading rooms are supplied with daily, weekly and monthly newspapers and magazines, and a new reading room was opened in 1899, at a cost of £1,400, in commemoration of the Diamond Jubilee of Her Majesty late Queen Victoria. The principal trade of Galashiels is the manufacture of tweeds, and there are many houses engaged in it. The manufacturers and weavers meet annually on the Friday nearest the 10th of October, for the purpose of electing a deacon of their trade, and conferring on matters therewith connected. In the town is a large leather tannery. The National Bank of Scotland Limited, the Bank of Scotland, the Royal Bank of Scotland, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited and the British Linen Bank all have branches here. There are four hotels and posting houses in the town, namely: "The Douglas," "Maxwell's," "The Royal" and "The Abbotsford." Two newspapers are published here, the "Border Telegraph" and the "Border Standard," both of which have a large circulation in the border counties. The combination Poor House is at Windyknowe, and contains 57 beds. A Cottage Hospital, the funds for which were raised by public subscription, was erected at Eastlands in 1894, at a cost of £3,813; it contains 15 beds and is attended by the medical men of the town. The Hospital for Contagious Diseases is also at Eastlands, and contains 10 beds. The Public Park, Abbotsford road, was presented to the town by J. H. F. K. Scott esq. in 1882. Gala House, standing in a small park, is the seat of John Henry Francis Kinnaird Scott esq. D.L., J.P. The civil parish of Galashiels comprises an acreage of 6,455; burgh, 897 acres; gross assessable value of the parish, £82,665; the burgh, £76,509; the population in 1901 was: civil parish, 13,969; burgh, 13,615, and in 1911, civil parish, including 30 inmates and 3 officials in Galashiels Combination Poorhouse, 14,917; burgh, 14,531.

The population of the municipal wards in 1911 was: first, 3,254; second, 3,295; third, 2,659; fourth, 2,733; fifth, 2,608.

The population of the ecclesiastical parishes in 1911 was: Parish Church, 5,115; West Church, 4,879.

The population of the parliamentary borough in 1911 was 13,679; number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1915 was 2,371.

CLOVENFORDS, originally a hamlet in this parish, was transferred in 1898 to Caddonfoot parish, and will be found under that heading.

HEATHERLIE, see SELKIRK.

INNERLEITHEN, a parish, formerly partly in this county, but chiefly in the adjoining county of Peebles, has now been transferred entirely to Peebles-shire under the provisions of the "Local Government Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50).

KIRKHOPE is a parish, formerly part of the parish of Yarrow, from which it was disjoined in 1852; it is in the presbytery of Selkirk, and in Hawick poor combination and Selkirk small debt court district, and is 9 miles long by 5 broad, bounded on the north-west by Yarrow, north-east by Selkirk, east by Ashkirk and Roxburghshire, and south-west by Ettrick. The Ettrick water, which in its course is fed by several burns, flows through the north-west part of the parish, which is very hilly, there being eight eminences in the parish above the height of 1,000 feet. There is a church of the Establishment and a Board school at Ettrick Bridge End, a small village in Kirkhope, 7 miles south-west from Selkirk terminal station on the branch of the North British railway. The Duke of Buccleuch, Lord Polwarth and Thomas Scott Anderson esq. M.D., J.P., are the principal landowners. Acreage, 22,734; rateable value, £6,042; population in 1911, 344.

Post, T. & Telephone Call Office (available for calls to places within a limited distance) & Express Delivery Office, Ettrick Bridge; Miss Isabella Cleghorn, sub-postmistress. Letters received through Selkirk. Delivery, 10.45 a.m.; dispatch, 11.30 a.m. No delivery or dispatch on Sundays. Selkirk is the nearest money order office, 7 miles distant

LINDEAN, see GALASHIELS.

ROBERTON is a parish, formerly partly in this county and partly in Roxburghshire, but is now included wholly in the latter county, under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50).

SELKIRK

SELKIRK is an ancient town, occupying a rising ground, at the foot of which flows the river Ettrick, and is a royal and police burgh, the seat of a presbytery, and the capital of its county and parish, in Galashiels poor combination, 35 miles south-south-east from Edinburgh, 22 east-by-south from Peebles, 12 north-north-west from Hawick, 8 south-west from Melrose and 6 south from Galashiels, with a terminal station on a branch from Galashiels of the North British railway. The place derives its name from a kirk established here at an early date, when the locality became distinguished as a hunting seat of the kings. In the oldest charter it is called "Scheleschirche," which signifies the Kirk of the Shiels or Shielings. After the transfer to Kelso of a monastery, founded here by David I. about 1113, the town around the old castle received the dignified title of "Selkirk Regis," while the village of the monks was denominated "Selkirk Abbatis." Of the Castle of Selkirk, at which David I. occasionally resided, little is known, and its size cannot now be satisfactorily ascertained. The rivers Ettrick and Yarrow form a junction about a mile and a half south-west from Selkirk, and empty their waters into the Tweed, about 2 miles north of the town. As a royal burgh, Selkirk is governed by a provost, 2 bailies, a dean of guild, and 11 councillors, one-third of whom retire annually. The sheriff court is held on Friday. The magistrates hold criminal courts as occasion requires. Quarter sessions are held on the first Tuesday in March, May and August, and last Tuesday of October, and special justice of peace courts when found necessary. The water supply of the town has been augmented and the source changed from Mill Haugh to Howden Haugh. Here is an Established church, three United Free churches, a Roman Catholic church, and Baptist and Congregational churches. The Episcopal church of St. John the Evangelist, built in 1869, will seat about 180 persons; the rectory, net yearly value £254, has been held since 1910 by the Rev. James G. McCall M.A. of Cambridge University. The old Town Hall, in the Market place, contains the court room in which Sir Walter Scott once presided as sheriff of the county; it is now used for burgh courts, meetings of Town Council; and other public bodies. In 1870 buildings were completed for the business of the county, including a sheriff court room, and offices for the sheriff clerk, procurator fiscal, and other officials. The Victoria Hall, built by public subscription at a cost of £7,400, in commemoration of the Diamond Jubilee of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria, and opened in 1897, is used for public meetings, concerts &c. The old Mercat Cross, standing in the Market place, was rebuilt in 1898, by public subscription, as a similar memorial. There is also a Masonic Hall and a Free Library. Selkirk was in past ages celebrated for the making of brogues (a description of single-soled shoes); tradition carries the existence of this trade so far back as the period of the battle of Flodden, in which conflict, it is asserted, the brogue makers or "souters" of Selkirk took a distinguished part. As a further proof of the consequence and ability of the professors of this craft, it appears from the town records that when the Highland army, in 1745, commanded the magistrates of Edinburgh to furnish 6,000 pairs of shoes, these civic officials made a call upon the burgh of Selkirk for no less than a third of the quantity, which was supplied. The principal manufactures now carried on consist of various descriptions of woollen goods—tweeds, tartans, plaids and shawls—and wool spinning. The hospital for contagious diseases was built and opened in 1899. The market is held on Wednesday, and fairs on the 5th April and 31st October. There is also an auction mart, where sales are held for cattle &c. fortnightly on Wednesday. There are branches in the town of the British Linen Bank, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, and the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, and there is a Savings Bank. The principal inns are the "County," the "Fleece," and the "Station Hotel." One weekly newspaper is published in the town, the "Southern Reporter." In the Market place is a fine monument to Sir Walter Scott, and, in High street, is another, by Andrew Currie, a native artist, to Mungo Park, the African traveller, who was a native of Foulshields, in this county, born 10 Sept. 1771, and drowned in the Niger, 1805, and a perfect statue of a standard bearer, by Thomas J. Clapperton, a local sculptor, to commemorate Flodden Field, has been placed near the Victoria Hall. Bowhill, the beautiful mansion of the Duke of Buccleuch, stands near the junction of the Yarrow and Ettrick waters, in a park about a mile long by half a mile broad, and contains a small lake. Philiphaugh, an ancient estate, an existing charter of which dates from the time of Robert the Bruce, was the scene of the disastrous battle, 13 Sept. 1645, when the royalist forces, under the Marquess of Montrose, were defeated by David Leslie and the Scottish Covenanters: it is now the residence of Samuel Strang Steel esq. J.P. and includes a castellated mansion, standing in a park on the north bank of the Yarrow. The Haining, the seat of Professor A. Seth Pringle-Pattison LL.D., J.P. has a park about 1 mile long by half a mile broad, and contains a lake about a quarter of a mile in length. Broadmeadows, on the north bank of the Yarrow water, in a small park, is the seat of Hugo C. Lang esq. Sunderland Hall, on the south bank of the Tweed, surrounded by grounds, is the seat of Charles Henry Scott-Plummer esq. D.L., J.P. Whitmuir Hall is the seat of C. W. Dunlop esq. D.L., J.P. Newark Castle, near the Yarrow water, but now in ruins, was built by James II. and the royal arms, with the unicorn, are carved in stone on the western side. The office of keeper was latterly held by the Douglas-Scott family, dukes of Buccleuch, and when the forest of Ettrick was disparked, they obtained a grant of the castle in perpetuity The area of the civil parish is 17,854 acres; burgh, 544 acres; gross rateable value of the landward, £13,227; of the burgh, £31,072; population in 1911, civil parish, 7,406; ecclesiastical parish, 5,182; royal and municipal burgh, 5,886.

The population of the wards in 1911 was:—Selkirk burgh, 5,886: Bowhill, 177; North, 346; Philiphaugh, 643; South, 354.

The population of the parliamentary borough in 1911 was 5,946; the number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1915 was 1,084.

Under the provisions of the "Local Government Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), that part of Selkirk parish formerly in Roxburghshire has been added to this county.

HEATHERLIE is a quoad sacra parish, constituted in January, 1885, and comprises about one-third of the area of the lower part of the parish. Here is an Established church and a Congregational chapel. The population in 1911 was 2,232.

STOW is an extensive parish and village partly in this county, but chiefly in the adjoining county of Edinburgh, where particulars will be found.

YARROW is a large parish, in the Galashiels poor combination, in the small debt court district of Selkirk and in the presbyteries of Selkirk and Galashiels; it is 15 miles long by from 1½ to 7 broad, and is bounded on the west and north by Peeblesshire, north-east by the river Tweed, south-east by Selkirk and Kirkhope and south by Ettrick. The village from near the centre of the parish is 11 miles south-west from Selkirk terminal station on a branch of the North British railway, and about the same distance south from Innerleithen station on the Galashiels and Peebles section of the same line. The parish is very picturesque, and its praises have been well sung by James Hogg, the "Ettrick Shepherd." There are Established and United Free churches. The Parish Hall, erected in 1908, will seat 170 persons. St. Mary's Loch, which is about 3 miles long by half a mile broad, on the borders of Peeblesshire, is a great resort for visitors in summer, and excellent accommodation can be had at the Rodono Hotel and at "Tibbie Shiels," a favourite "houf" of Christopher North, who has immortalised it in his "Noctes Ambrosianæ." The Yarrow water, which flows from St. Mary's Loch, and in its course receives several burns, runs through part of the parish, and after forming part of its south-eastern boundary, traverses the parish of Selkirk, and joins the Ettrick about 2 miles south of that town. The highest mountains in the parish are, Black Law, 2,285 feet; Blackhouse Heights, 2,213; Deer Law, 2,065; The Wiss, 1,932; Minch Moor, 1,856 and Black Knowe, 1,806. The Hangingshaw is the residence of Richard Brown esq. The Duke of Buccleuch, who is lord of the manor, the trustees of the late James Henry L'Estrange Johnstone and Herbert Constable Maxwell-Stuart esq. are the principal landowners. The area is 48,451 acres; rateable value, £9,789; population in 1911, 510 civil and 1,476 ecclesiastical, of which 1,010 was in Peeblesshire. Under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary orders 56 and 59, a part of Lyne and Megget parish in Peebles county has been transferred to this parish.

MEGGET, originally united with the parish of Lyne in Peeblesshire, was transferred by boundary order 56, under "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889," to this parish, but was left united to its former co-parish for ecclesiastical purposes and has a United Free church; it lies north-west to St. Mary's Loch, and had in 1911 a population of 74.

THE SHETLAND ISLES

OR COUNTY OF SHETLAND

THE SHETLAND, or Zetland, Isles, which form a county of Scotland, are above 100 in number, twenty-eight of which only are inhabited, forming a group of islands, islets and rocks, in the Northern Sea, 200 miles west of Bergen, in Norway, lying between 50 degs. 48 mins. 30 secs. and 60 degs. 52 mins. north latitude, and between 1 deg. 52 secs. and 1 deg. 57 mins. west longitude from London. Fair Island, one of the Shetland group, lies 25 miles south of the other islands and half way to Orkney, Sumburgh Head, the southern point of Shetland, being 100 miles north-east from Duncansbay Head, the northern point of Caithness, and 52 north-east of Dennis Head, North Ronaldshay, the extreme north point of the Orkneys. There are three principal islands in the group, namely, Mainland, Yell (on the north), and (still further north-east) Unst; on the east of Yell lies Fetlar, which is the largest of the inferior islands, the lochs of which are famous for trout, and several of the other islands abound with seal, otter and wild fowl. The next island in point of size is Bressay; the smaller ones are Whalsay, Out Skerries, Samphray, Big Island, Mickle Roe, Papa Stour, Burra, Foula, Trondra, besides a great number of islets, holms and skerries. The highest land in these islands is Roeness Hill, which attains an elevation of 1,447 feet. The Hill of Foula is next in altitude, being about 1,300 feet above the level of the sea. The aggregate area is 551.4 square miles, or 352,319 acres of land and 9,636 of water. The population in 1901 was 28,166, and in 1911, 27,911, viz.:—males, 12,589; females, 15,322. The inhabited houses were in 1901, 5,422 and in 1911, inhabited, 6,204; uninhabited, 415, and building, 17.

Early History.—It seems probable that the Romans visited the coasts of Shetland, from the coins of that people which have been discovered—those of Galba, Vespasian, Trajan and Ælius Cæsar, and the remains of a small Roman camp are to be traced on the island of Fetlar. There seems to be little doubt these islands were first inhabited by the Scandinavians, the laws having been administered by "Udallers," who acted as a sort of petty princes, and under these chiefs and the Udal laws cultivated land was free of tax. In the year 875, Harold Harfager, or "The Fairhaired," subdued these islands, and gave them to Count Sigurd, who was the first Earl of Orkney, from whom sprang the true Norwegian dynasties of the Earls of Orkney and Shetland—the latter county being at first too insignificant to be included in the title, although it was included in the grant. On the cession of the Shetland Isles to the Scottish crown, the laws of the former were gradually encroached upon by the endeavours of the Scotch earls to introduce feudal subjection and seniorage in place of the ancient udal tenures. From 1468, when a marriage was concerted between the Scottish monarch, James III. and the Princess of Norway (when Orkney and Shetland were pledged to the royal husband), to the time when the two countries passed to the English crown, in the persons of Charles I. and II. and afterwards to the Earl of Morton (who sold the estate to Sir Lawrence Dundas), nothing occurs relating to the possession of Shetland that calls for any particular notice. Lord Robert Stuart, natural brother to Queen Mary, had a grant of the islands in 1565 and in 1581 was made justiciar, and in 1612 the islands were erected into a stewartry as Crown property.

Soil, Produce &c.—The general aspect is bleak and barren; and although there is but little to attract in the form of landscape in what may be called the interior of the islands—the whole of them being destitute of wood—their coast scenery presents views of a highly interesting character; and the tourist may here see wild scenery of diversified appearance and picturesque grandeur in the coast of Shetland. The peculiar breed of Shetland ponies are bred for exportation, and these small ponies, or "shelties" as they are called, traverse their way across the wastes without much difficulty. The cattle of Shetland are of a very diminutive breed, a cow weighing from two to three hundredweight upon an average; an ox from three to four, but seldom exceeding five hundredweight. A great abundance of poultry is kept on almost every farm, and small swine are numerous. The sheep are very small, but produce wool of an excellent quality, which is knitted into shawls, veils, stockings, gloves and mitts. Little attention is paid to agriculture, and the system of cultivation adopted is poor, the principal crops grown being oats, potatoes and turnips, the latter introduced early in the last century.

The chief crops in 1914, as appears from the "Agricultural Statistics of Scotland," are: oats, 6,511 acres; barley, including bere, 6,511; the total corn crop being 7,295 acres; potatoes, 2,539 acres; turnips and swedes, 1,044; cabbage, 631; total green crops, 4,214 acres; rye-grass and other rotation grasses (for hay), 1,139 acres; pasture (not for hay), 556 acres; bare fallow, 642 acres. Total area of land, 352,319, of which 314,079 acres are mountain and heath land (used for grazing); 22,124 acres permanent grass; 13,864 acres arable land and 7 only of woods and plantations.

The live stock in 1914 comprised—horses used solely for agriculture and brood mares, 2,643; stallions, 94; other horses, one year and above, 498; under one year, 400; cows in milk, 5,656; cows in calf, but not in milk, 774; heifers in calf, 401; other cattle, two years and above, 1,820; one year and under two, 2,660; under one year, 3,079; ewes kept for breeding, 77,856; other sheep, one year and above, 22,971; under one year, 56,819; sows kept for breeding, 82; other pigs, 471. The fuel in general use is peat, the cutting and drying of which occupies diligent attention.

AGRICULTURAL HOLDINGS:—Above 1 and not exceeding 5 acres, 1,713; above 5 and not exceeding 15 acres, 1,316; above 15 and not exceeding 30 acres, 252; above 30 and not exceeding 50 acres, 62; above 50 and not exceeding 75 acres, 23; above 75 and not exceeding 100 acres, 9; above 100 and not exceeding 150 acres, 9; above 150 and not exceeding 300 acres; 7; exceeding 300 acres, 5; total, 3,396.

The chief support of the Shetlander is dependent on the white fishery—herring, cod and ling abounding on the coasts; besides which many men and boys are employed every season in the Davis Straits whale fishing. Persons are also engaged in angling for the small fry of the coal fish or "gadus carbonarius"—known in Shetland by the name of "sethe." These, which swarm in myriads within the numerous creeks and sounds of this northern archipelago, first appear in May scarcely more than an inch long, and about August they become more abundant, measuring about eight inches in length, and in the early part of the following year they attain the ordinary size of the cod-fish. A profitable fishery then takes place in deep tideways, supplying the inhabitants with a portion of food and oil from the livers for light and other purposes. In 1913 there were 430 fishing boats registered at Lerwick under Part IV. of the "Merchant Shipping Act, 1894," with an aggregate tonnage of 7,033, and requiring 1,977 men and boys to work them. In 1913 2,165 fishermen (men and boys) were resident within the limits of the port.

The total value of all fish landed in 1914 in the Shetland district was £319,590.

The number of sailing and steam vessels registered as belonging to Lerwick on December 31st, 1913, was 61 of 2,379 tons.

The Shetland Isles, or county of Shetland, comprise 12 civil parishes, comprising 18 ecclesiastical parishes in two presbyteries and one synod. The only town in this northern group is Lerwick; besides it, there are only a few villages and hamlets on the shores, of which Scalloway is the largest. The islands now pay their proportion of the land tax, and in every other respect have become subject to British laws. They are represented in Parliament as in connection with the Orkneys, to which sheriffdom they belong. The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1915 was 4,013.

BRESSAY is an island and parish, in Zetland poor combination and Lerwick small debt court district, separated from Lerwick, the capital of the islands, by the Sound of Bressay, which is 6 miles in length, with a breadth of from 1 to 3 miles. The original parish comprised Bressay, Burra and Quarff, but in 1830, Burra and Quarff were erected into a separate parish. Previous to the Reformation, there were in Bressay three small churches or chapels, viz.: St. Olla's at Gunnista, St. Mary's at Cullensbrough, and St. John's at Kirkabister; the ruins of St. Olla's and St. Mary's still remain, but these, in the former case, consist only of the foundations: the chapel of St. Olla consisted of chancel and nave, together about 27 feet in length, but the nave is proportionate, being nearly as wide as it is long: the walls are much broken, varying in height from 4 to 10 feet, and only the east window is left. To the north-east of Bressay, on the top of a hillock, stands a rude monolith, 10 feet in height, called the "Standing Stone of Keldabister." At Cullingsburgh is a burial ground and some remains of a chapel, with a very small chancel and a nave placed transversely. The parish church, an ancient structure, contains two marble tablets to members of the Cameron Mouat family: the church has been enlarged, and in 1895-6 was repaired and restored, and two stained windows inserted: there are sittings for 500 persons. Bressay is well known for its bold and beautiful rock scenery, the most striking feature being the Isle of Noss, which lies due east of Bressay and is separated from it by a narrow and dangerous sound: on the west side are fragments of a chapel, 14 feet long, and traces of a burial ground. The Noup of Noss, a grand precipitous height, is nearly 600 feet above the sea level, and here innumerable birds of various kinds may be seen during the summer months, and grey eagles are occasionally found. The "Holm of Noss," a small table-land lying on the east, is detached from the main island by a sheer gulf of 65 feet. The island belongs to the Rt. Rev. William Mouat Cameron D.D. (Coadjutor Bishop of Capetown). The area is 7,402 acres; rateable value, £1,731; population in 1911, 641.

NOSS ISLAND is included within this parish. The population in 1911 was 6. Under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order No. 94, East Burra, Hevera, Holm of Papal, Papa, Quarff, Mainland and West Burra Islands have been transferred to Lerwick.

CUNNINGSBURGH is a part of the quoad sacra parish of Sandwick and Cunningsburgh, taken from Dunrossness, in Zetland poor combination and Lerwick small debt court district, 10 miles south-south-west from Lerwick. DUNROSSNESS is a parish, in Zetland poor combination and Lerwick small debt court district, and embraces the quoad sacra parish of Cunningsburgh with Sandwick, and also Fair Isle, for which see separate headings. It forms the southern extremity of the Shetland Archipelago, and extends about 20 miles south-south-west from Lerwick. Fitful Head, 928 feet on the south-west, and Sumburgh Head, 300 feet, the extreme southern point and about 100 miles north of Caithnessshire, are in this parish; the latter, 25 miles from Lerwick, is surmounted by a lighthouse, erected in 1820, by George Stevenson, at a cost of nearly £40,000. There are Established and United Free churches, and Baptist and Wesleyan chapels. Opposite Sand Lodge, in this parish, is Mousa Island, and close to its western shore stands what is known as a "Pict's Castle," a cylindrical structure of rude masonry, about 40 feet in height and 158 feet in circumference at the base, and tapering upwards: the lower portion of the wall is 16 feet in thickness, but the upper part not more than 6ft. 5in.: the entrance is over 6ft. high and has a square head and sloping jambs. Sumburgh House is the seat of Mrs. Bruce. Area, 32,301 acres; rateable value (including the above quoad sacra parishes), £5,272; population of the whole parish of Dunrossness in 1911, 3,761, and of the ecclesiastical parish, 1,520.

Fair Isle is in the civil parish, and will be found under a separate heading.

FAIR ISLAND, situated midway between the Orkney and Shetland Isles, 26 miles north-east of North Ronaldshay (Orkney) and 21 south-west of Sumburgh Head, the southernmost point of Shetland, forms part of the civil parish of Dunrossness and is in the poor combination of Zetland and the small debt court district of Lerwick. The island is about 3½ miles long and 2 broad, and is the property of Robert H. Bruce esq. J.P.: it has generally a level and verdant surface and is bordered by lofty and wildly indented precipices, from which, at the south end, the land falls in fine grassy slopes to a cultivated hollow, extending to about the middle of the island: to the north the ground is mostly coarse and hilly, and serves as pastures: on the east side is the tiny isthmus of Buness, which has a fine sandy beach, and to the south-east is the curiously formed Sheep Crag peninsula. At Schwarz Gio, south of the Sheep Crag, a ship of the Spanish Armada is said to have been wrecked in 1588. There are lighthouses on the north and south points of the island, and an Established church. The area is 1,939 acres; valuation included in that of Dunrossness; population in 1911 was 129.

FETLAR is an island and parish, in Zetland poor combination and Lerwick small debt court district, lying east of Yell, from which it is separated by Colgrave Sound, and distant about 34 miles north-north-east of Lerwick. It is a grassy and picturesquely diversified island, and appears to have once had quite a number of chapels, of which there are now scarcely any remains. There are Established and United Free churches, the former being at the head of Tresta Bay, on the south. Under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order No. 93, Yell Island has been transferred from this parish to Yell. Brough Lodge, in this parish, is the residence of Sir Arthur Thomas Bennet Robert Nicolson bart. D.L., J.P. The area is 9,906 acres; rateable value, £825; population in 1911, 279.

LERWICK, the principal town in Shetland, is (by steamer) 272 miles from Leith, 186 from Aberdeen, 165 from Peterhead (Aberdeenshire), 146 from Wick, and 100 from Kirkwall, and is situated on the east coast of Mainland, the largest island of the group. It bears the name of the bay upon whose margin it is built; and that, in turn, derives its name from a long narrow inlet on the opposite shore of the island of Bressay, called "Lera-voe," remarkable for its extensive deposit of clay and mud; a projecting point at the entrance to Lera-voe" is called "Leraness," and the whole bay, including the roadstead of Bressay sound, is named "Lerwick," which signifies the "bay of clay," or "mud"—compounded of Icelandic leir, Danish leir (clay, mud), and the Scandinavian "wick," or "vig" (an arm of the sea, an anchorage). The site of the town, founded by Dutch smugglers in 1670, is a segment of the sea shore of nearly half a mile in length, becoming gradually more elevated as it recedes from the coast line and presenting the appearance of a perfect amphitheatre, which, viewed from the opposite anchorage, has a singularly picturesque effect. The principal street extends through the whole length of the town, following the curvature of the sea shore, and numerous lanes and closes, laid out at right angles to it, lead to a spacious road on the eminence above the town. By the "Lerwick Harbour Improvements Act, 1877," an Esplanade was made along the shore, extending nearly to the whole length of the town, and a pier, 350 feet in length, constructed; both were completed in June, 1886; the total cost being £23,089. In 1907 a new quay and covered fish mart, for the use of the fishermen and salesmen, were erected at a cost of £15,000. In 1913-15 the main pier was lengthened by 100 feet, and the access to the pier considerably widened, while a substantial breakwater was built out from Hay's steps (running north-east and north); the cost of the extension was about £35,000. The houses are built of a species of grey sandstone, which abounds in the immediate vicinity, and is of great durability. The town is well supplied with water brought from Sandy Loch, about 2 miles above the town, in 1871, at a cost of £4,140, and at the same time sewerage works were constructed at a cost of £2,365. The harbour of Lerwick (or Bressay sound, as it is frequently called) is very spacious, and is bounded on the east by the island of Bressay, and on the west by Mainland, having an entrance from the south and another from the north. Its extent may be inferred from the fact that a squadron of war ships has anchored in it. During the year 1913 there arrived at the port 464 vessels with cargoes and in ballast of 47,959 tons, and 404 departed of 51,494 tonnage. In the general coasting trade 591 vessels of 153,265 tons arrived and 555 departed of 146,198 tonnage.

The number of fishing boats registered in 1913 belonging to the port was 430, with a tonnage of 7,073, employing 1,977 men and boys. The number of regular fishermen (men and boys) resident within the limits of the port in 1913 was 2,165. The number of vessels registered in the same year was 61, of 2,379 tons. The value of the imports in 1913 was £78,140 and of exports £330,482, of which £323,589 was fish.

FORT CHARLOTTE stands on a rocky eminence at the northern extremity of the town, and commands the whole range of the anchorage, from the south to the north entrance of the harbour. It was originally built in the reign of Charles II.; but having been dismantled and allowed to fall into a state of dilapidation, it was rebuilt in 1781, and received the name it now bears in honour of the consort of George III. It is at present used as a coast guard station. Lerwick is a burgh of barony, by charter dated 1818, and is now, under the provisions of the "Burgh Police (Scotland) Act, 1892," governed by twelve councillors, including a provost and two bailies; by special provision of the Act, it has power to appoint its own police, separate from the county. The sheriff ordinary, debt recovery and small debt courts are held every Friday during the session. The justice of peace small debt court is held as occasion requires. The commissioners of supply and the provincial synod of Shetland also hold their meetings in Lerwick. The parish church, situated on an eminence at the south end of the town, is a building of stone in the Classic style, but has a somewhat heavy appearance; there is also a United Free church and Baptist, Congregational and Wesleyan chapels, and meeting rooms for Plymouth Brethren, and the Salvation Army. The Episcopal church of St. Magnus, built in 1864, will seat 240 persons; the Rev. Benjamin Maturin M.A. of Trinity College, Dublin, has been rector since 1908. The Roman Catholic church was built in 1911. The Town Hall, erected at a cost of about £5,500, the foundation stone being laid by H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh, 24th Jan. 1882, is an edifice of Orkney freestone, in the Scottish Gothic style, from designs by Mr. Alexander Ross, architect, of Inverness, and was opened on the 12th of August, 1883. In 1887, on the occasion of the Jubilee of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria, a clock and a fine peal of 8 bells, provided by subscription, were placed in the building, at a cost of about £600, and in 1906, 3 additional bells, the gift of the late R. P. Gilberson esq. of London, were added. Near the Town Hall are the County buildings, erected in 1875, containing a sheriff court house and offices and a county hall, and attached to these is the prison. The Shetland Literary and Scientific Society have a library and news room in Commercial street, which is open to the public; the library contains about 4,000 volumes. The Anderson Institute, built in 1862, and the Widows' Homes, erected in 1865, are at the south end of the town. Both were founded by the late Arthur Anderson esq. a native of Shetland and founder of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company, who represented Orkney and Shetland in parliament during the session of 1847. The Institute, which consists of a higher grade school, is now under the Lerwick school board. A hostel for girl bursars, the gift of R. H. Bruce esq. is now (1915) in course of erection near the Institute. The Widows' Homes, erected for the indigent widows of fishermen, for whom a pension fund has also been provided, consists of 12 houses, of from three to six rooms each. The "Gilbert Bain" Memorial Hospital, containing 9 beds, was presented to the county by the sisters of the late Gilbert Bain esq. in 1901; it has since been enlarged, and now has 20 beds. The Combination Hospital for Infectious Diseases, on the South road, contains 8 beds. The Poorhouse, erected ourside the town, at a cost of £5,000, contains 55 beds, and is for the poor of the whole of the county. Adjacent is a hospital for the inmates, built at an expenditure of £2,000, and containing 17 beds. There are branches here of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, and the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited. Two newspapers are published here weekly, the "Shetland News" and the "Shetland Times." There are two first-class hotels: the "Grand" and the "Queen's." Near Lerwick, on a small freshwater island, reached by stepping-stones from the shore, is a Picts' Castle, called "Brough of Clickamin," similar to that on Mousa island; it is nearly circular, with walls in stages of unequal thickness, varying from over 26 feet at the base to 11 feet at the top, which has a diameter of 33 ft. 6 in. but the total height is now only about 16 feet; the entrance is on the west, and there are openings in the thickness of the wall which led to the summit: this fort was surrounded at a short distance by a curtain or vallum, part of which, on the south side, remains, and at the point where the stepping-stones reach the island, is a square gateway or barbican. A public park was presented to the town in 1895 by the late Robert P. Gilberson esq. and bears his name. A considerable portion of the produce of Shetland, consisting of fresh and salted fish, beef, oil, butter and hosiery, passes to market through the merchants of Lerwick, who, in turn, import nearly all the groceries, spirits and manufactured goods used throughout the islands. Sheep and cattle sales are held every Monday during September, October and November, and the Shetland Agricultural Society hold their annual show here in August. The area of the civil parish, 10,923 acres; rateable value of landward, £5,859; burghal, £25,371; population in 1901, 6,519, and in 1911, 7,296 in the civil parish, including 38 inmates and officials in the Shetland Combination Poorhouse and 255 on board ships; ecclesiastical, 6,187; police burgh, 4,664.

QUARFF, Mainland, East and West Burra, Hevera, Holm of Papal and Papa Island, forming together the quoad sacra parish of Quarff, were on May 15, 1891, under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889," transferred from Bressay parish to Lerwick. Quarff is situated on Mainland, about 6 miles south-west from Lerwick, and has Established and United Free churches. East and West Burra are small islands situated to the west of the mainland, from which they are separated by Clift sound, and are distant about 4 miles south from Scalloway: there is a United Free church. The area is 5,255 acres; rateable value included with Lerwick. The population of Quarff ecclesiastical parish in 1911 was 1,109. The population of the islands in 1911 was: East Burra, 180; West Burra, 665; Hevera, 29; Holm of Papal, 2; Papa, 13.

LUNNASTING, see NESTING.

MAINLAND (sometimes called Shetland) is the largest island, and consists of the parishes of Delting, Dunrossness, Lerwick, Nesting, Northmavine, Sandsting, Tingwall and Walls; its length from Fethaland Point at the northern extremity to Sumburgh Head at the southern, is 55 miles, and its breadth varies from 5 to 20 miles; the total area comprises about 240,000 acres; its form is irregular and the coast much indented; the narrow portion of the island begins on the south and runs northward for 20 miles, it then projects westward, containing the parishes of Walls and Sandsting, the breadth at this point being about 18 miles, subsequently the width is reduced to 10 miles, and trends to the east, here containing the parish of Northmavine, which projects to the west, and is 15 miles in extreme length; between the two westerly projections lies St. Magnus Bay, and to the east of the northern parish is Yell Sound, which divides it from the island of that name. Mainland contains the two principal towns of the group, Lerwick and Scalloway.

MID YELL, see YELL.

MOSSBANK, see DELTING.

NESTING is a parish on the eastern side of Mainland Island, in Zetland poor combination and the small debt court district of Lerwick; it includes the quoad sacra parish and island of Whalsay, and the islands of Bound Skerries, Bruray Skerries, Grunay Skerries and Housay Skerries, as well as the kirktowns of Lunna and Nesting, which contain the two Established churches of the Mainland portion of the parish; there is a Wesleyan chapel at Nesting and a Baptist chapel at LUNNASTING.

WHALSAY ISLAND lies to the east of Mainland, from which it is divided by Lunna Sound, and is about 15 miles north-east from Lerwick, with which town it has steam communication three times a week. There is an Established church on the island.

The SKERRIES ISLANDS (or Out Skerries) lie a little to the north-east of Whalsay. Here is an Established Mission church.

On BOUND SKERRIES ISLAND is a lighthouse.

WHALSAY and Skerries form a quoad sacra parish. The population in 1911 was 1,186.

VIDLIN is a hamlet on Mainland, with a steamer pier and post office, about 24 miles north from Lerwick, to which town a steamer sails once a week. The total area of the parish, including Lunnasting, Whalsay and Out Skerries, is 30,950 acres; acreage of Nesting proper being 13,523; of Lunnasting, 11,806, and of Whalsay, 4,881, and the Skerries, 773; rateable value of the entire parish is £2,352.

The population of the entire civil parish in 1911 was 2,350 island, and ecclesiastical parish, 1,164.

SCALLOWAY is a village and seaport in the parish of Tingwall, 6½ miles from Lerwick, on the north side of a fine bay on the west side of Mainland, and anciently the capital of Shetland. Here are Established and United Free churches and Congregational and Wesleyan chapels, a Public Hall and a Custom House; here also are sub-branches of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited and the Union Bank of Scotland Limited. Near the village, on the east side of the bay, and situated on a ness jutting south towards the island of Trondra, are the ruins of Scalloway Castle, erected in 1600 by Patrick Stewart, 2nd Earl of Orkney (of that family), and Lord Zetland; these consist chiefly of an irregular square tower, with gables and angle turrets, and windows barred with gratings. Fishing is the chief industry, the hauls consisting principally of cod, ling, haddock and herring, and for facilitating this trade there are several quays, warehouses and cooperages. Some of the inhabitants possess feued ground, and have erected houses for themselves. The village is well supplied with water, which is conveyed in pipes from the Scord above, and in 1906 a reservoir holding 50,000 gallons was constructed. On the west shore is a spring of excellent water, the flow from which is uninfluenced by the seasons, being constant and abundant; but it is covered by the sea at high water. There is now a pier here at which steamers call. The population of the Parish Ward in 1911 was 824.

UNST, the most northerly of the large islands, and separated from Yell by the Blue Mull Sound, is also a parish which includes the islands of Balta, Muckle Flugga and Uyea, and is in the small debt court district of Lerwick and the poor combination of Zetland: it is 16 miles in length from north to south and abou 6 miles in extreme breadth, but its coast line on the east is irregular and deeply indented: Saxa Vord hill, to the north of the island, reaches a height of 934 feet. At Cowiefield the juridical assemblies or folkthings were once held, but these were afterwards removed to Tingwall on Mainland. Baltasound, about the middle of the island, is, after Lerwick, the second chief station of the herring fishing in these islands, and here are Established and United Free churches, and there is also a United Free church on Uyea Sound, to the south of the island. At the head of Balta Sound is the House of Buness, the residence of Laurence Edmondston esq. J.P.; here, in 1817-8, Jean Baptiste Biot, the French chemist and philosopher, and Capt. Henry Kater carried out their experiments in order to determine the variations in the length of the seconds-pendulum, and there still exists in the grounds of Buness two stones used by Biot in his measurements. A rock on the coast has a natural arch or tunnel nearly 300 feet long, through which boats can pass. Harold-wick is a village a little north of Baltasound, and has a Wesleyan chapel and traces of two ancient churches. In 1817 chromate of iron was found in the vicinity of Buness. Balta island lies off the east coast and Flugga is off the extreme north point; Uyea is an island in Skuda Sound, at the south end of Unst, and contains remains of a chapel, 37 feet in length, with an apparent chancel at the west end about 12 feet long. The island of Unst is well stocked with wild fowl, rabbits and trout (in lochs). The area comprises 29,874 acres: rateable value, £4,799; the population of the entire parish in 1911 was 2,077, including 246 on board ships; smaller islands having only 11 inhabitants in 1911.

WALLS is a parish comprising the islands of Foula, Linga, Papa Stour and Vaila and the districts of Walls and Sandness on Mainland, the distance from Walls to Lerwick being 24 miles by road. The parish is in the small debt court district of Lerwick and poor combination of Zetland, and occupies the western extremity of Mainland to the south of St. Magnus Bay, the southern part of the parish containing the village or kirktown of Walls, which contains Established and United Free churches and Congregational and Wesleyan chapels, and at SANDNESS, near the west coast, is an Established Church Mission. Foula Island, in this parish, lies 27 miles west from Scalloway, and is high and magnificently wild; it is about 3 miles in length by 1½ in breadth; the land on the east side is low, but on the west rises abruptly to a lofty ridge, the highest point of which reaches 1,369 feet above the sea level. The principal village is Hametown, at the south end of the island, situated in a pastoral and agricultural district, but Ham, on the centre of the east coast, is the chief place of business, since it has a small harbour into which laden craft may run. Here is an Established Mission church and a Congregational chapel: the former, standing in a burial ground near Hametown village, is a quaintly simple edifice of uncertain date, kept in repair by the proprietor of the island. At the north end of the island are the "Friars' Rocks," a magnificent stack, one of which is raised over three lofty arches, and on the summit of another is a ruined burgh or fort. Papa Stour Island lies about 2 miles off the north coast of the parish, and is noted for its granite precipices and caves, in which seals are found at certain seasons. This island was visited by the Irish missionaries, who also settled at Iona. It has a low landing place opposite Melby on Mainland, from which the land rises by smooth grassy slopes towards the northwest, where it ends in precipices of singular grandeur and picturesqueness. On the island is an Established Mission church. VAILA ISLAND lies south-west of Mainland, in Vaila Sound, and Linga Island lies to the north of Vaila between that island and Mainland. The area of the entire parish comprises 29,668 acres; that of Foula, 3,299, and Papa Stour, 2,107 acres; total rateable value, £1,925; the population of the parish in 1911 was 1,745, which included 184 in Foula Island and 212 on Papa Stour Island, 11 on Vaila Island and 4 on Linga Island.

YELL the largest of the three northmost or "Nord-isles" of Shetland is oblong, 17½ miles long by 6⅝ to 4 miles broad, lying north and south, Lat. 60° 29 to 44' N. Long. 0° 59' to 1° 12' W. Blummul-sound, half a mile wide, separates it from Unst on the north-east and Yell-sound from Northmavine 3½ miles on the west, and from Delting 2 miles on the south. Both are dangerous tideways with 8-knot currents. Yell is formed entirely of gneiss, covered deeply with peat, except the cultivated land along the shores. These vast layers of peat may in future be very valuable. The shores are low except the north-west, where the cliffs are 200 to 300 feet high. Yell has five excellent harbours, Bastavoe, Mid Yell-voe (notably so), Burravoe, Hamnavoe and Whalfirth. These were busy centres of the Scottish herring fishery from 1881 for twenty odd years till sailing boats were superceded by steam drifters. They are now much frequented by trawlers. Yell comprised three old parishes: of these Mid and South Yell formed a ministry and North Yell with Fetlar (isle) another. This still holds as regards tiends, but North Yell and South Yell have long been quoad sacra parishes, and under the "Local Government Act, 1889" all Yell was made a civil parish and Fetlar another. The Established church parish kirks are at Cullivoe, Mid Yell and Hamnavoe, and a Mission at Westsandwick. There are United Free churches at Sellafirth and West Yell, Wesleyan chapels at Mid Yell, East Yell and Burravoe and an Episcopal church (St. Colman's) at Burravoe. The law court for all Shetland is at Lerwick, so is the poor combination of Culdee. The largest village is Mid Yell (population 500), 32 miles north from Lerwick. The area of Yell is 52,136 acres; rateable value, 1915, £3,295; population, 1911: North Yell, 658; Mid Yell, 1,115; South Yell, 575; total, 2,348.

STIRLINGSHIRE

THIS is a midland county, marking the commencement of the Highlands, and is bounded on the south-west by Dumbartonshire, south by Lanarkshire and Linlithgowshire, on the west by Dumbartonshire, north by Perthshire and on the east by the very small county of Clackmannan and that of Linlithgowshire; from its position at the head of the Firth of Forth it is to some extent a seaboard county, Grangemouth having an extensive trade; its boundaries are in many places distinctly marked by water-courses or lakes—the principal boundary line on the north being the river Forth, the Avon on the east, the Kelvin river on the south, the Endrick water in the south-west, and Loch Lomond on the west. The figure of the county is extremely irregular; its length from east to west is 36 miles, but following the curvature of its form from east to its northern point, it will measure upwards of 45 miles; its breadth varies from 12 to 20 miles, except where it turns towards the north, and here the distance across is very trifling. The shire comprises an area of 451.3 square miles, or 288,842 acres of land and 8,003 of water. The population in 1901 was 142,291 and in 1911, 160,991, viz.: males, 82,335; females, 78,656. The inhabited houses in 1901 were 28,115 and in 1911, inhabited 33,082, uninhabited 1,851 and building, 74. In size Stirling stands as twentieth, and in population as the ninth of the counties of Scotland.

Early History.—Originally part of the Pictish possessions, it appears to have passed under the Roman rule about A.D. 80, and they have left traces of their long occupation in camps &c. while the wall of Antoninus, which extends from the Clyde to the Forth, runs across the southern portion of the county. Abandoned by the Romans in 410 it again fell under the Pictish rule until they were expelled by the Saxons and Scots, and about 1060 it became more settled under Malcolm (Ceanmohr), though even then subject to Norman raids, while two centuries later Edward I. extended his forays thus far, capturing the castle of Stirling in 1296. The victory of Stirling Bridge by Wallace over the English in 1297, and a similar victory by Bruce, at Bannockburn, 24th June, 1314, checked the English for a time. James II. was born in Stirling castle, and in 1452 he stabbed the 8th Earl of Douglas in a small room in the same castle. In June, 1488, James fought his rebel nobles at Sauchiehall. In 1528 James V. having escaped from the dominion of Angus, the Regent, assumed control of affairs at Stirling, where he subsequently built the palace still existing in the castle. On 29 July, 1567, James VI. still an infant, was crowned at Stirling, and Murray (who was shot in 1570) assumed the regency; the noble who succeeded him in this office was killed in September, 1571, by a band of Mary's adherents who surprised the town, and in 1651 Charles II. started from Stirling on his expedition to England, which terminated so disastrously at Worcester. In the 12th century David I. erected several religious houses, particularly that at Cambuskenneth, and these communities tended to civilize the rude manners of the inhabitants.

Surface, Soil, Produce, Minerals, Manufactures &c.—The part of the county which is adjacent to Loch Lomond is a mountainous district; here Ben Lomond rises to the height of more than 3,192 feet. East from this the land becomes flat, or gently inclining towards the Forth, or the Endrick. In the centre of the county the ground is again elevated into a series of hills, of which those of the greatest altitude are from 1,300 to 1,500 feet high; from one of these, in Kilsyth parish, there is obtained a view computed to embrace an extent of 12,000 square miles. Many of the hills in the central, and more especially in the southern division, have their sides and even their summits clothed with a fine grass sward, which affords excellent pasturage for sheep. The eastern division of the county consists of carse land, in many places quite flat, and in others presenting a succession of inclined planes, gradually rising towards the south from the rich valley of the Forth. Almost every variety of soil to be met with in Scotland occurs in Stirlingshire; but the most common and the most fertile is the alluvial, or carse land, which occupies many thousand acres on the banks of the Forth. In this species of soil there are beds of shells, clay, marl and moss. In the western and central districts, on the banks of the rivers, the land is generally of a light and gravelly description; while patches of rich loam form the surface in other parts of the county. Large crops of oats, barley, beans, turnips, potatoes &c. are raised, and the culture of artificial grasses has also been very generally adopted in this county. The extensive ranges of moor in the upland district are exclusively devoted to the feeding of sheep, which are of the old black-faced, or Highland breed; there are comparatively few cattle reared, the county being supplied from the Highlands.

The crops in 1914, as appears from the "Agricultural Statistics for Scotland," were—Oats, 16,999 acres; barley, including bere, 1,619; beans (to be harvested as corn), 1,853; wheat, 1,663; rye, 50; the total corn crops being 22,184 acres; turnips and swedes, 4,002 acres; potatoes, 3,725; mangolds, 10; cabbage, 129; rape, 342; vetches, tares, beans, mashlum &c. 601; total green crops, 8,709 acres; small fruit, 204; hay from rye-grass and other rotation grasses and clover, 12,250 acres; pasture (not for hay), 9,876; bare fallow, 697 acres. The mineral productions, as appears from the "Mines and Quarries General Report and Statistics" for 1913, include coal, fire clay, gravel and sand, igneous rocks, iron ore, limestone, oil shale and sandstone. The principal coal pits are in the southern base of the Lennox Hills; but this valuable article is also obtained in the eastern district in the vicinity of the Forth and Clyde canal, and in such quantities as not only to be sufficient for home consumption, but to admit of exportation. The production of coal in 1913 was 3,038,851 tons, value £1,528,717; fire clay, 210,797 tons, value £51,175; brick clay, 4,650 tons; iron ore, 52,332 tons. There are four blast furnaces in the county, the average in blast being $2\frac{6}{13}$. The total production is returned with the 67 blast furnaces in Lanarkshire, the amount produced being 960,419 tons. The total quantity of coal used in the manufacture of coke was 649,085 tons, the quantity of coke obtained being: at gas works, 30,749 tons, and at gas ovens, 390,335 tons. The production of gravel and sand, 74,999; igneous rocks, 76,452 tons; limestone, 5,351 tons; sandstone, 43,638 tons. The number of persons employed in all mines and quarries in 1913 was—underground, 8,582; above ground, 2,411; total, 10,993.

The staple manufacture of the county is iron goods, both cast and malleable, the chief seat of which is at Carron, near Falkirk. The making of nails for carpenters' work is also carried on in several parishes (especially in that of Saint Ninians); at Saint Ninians are likewise manufactured tartans; at Stirling, carpets, tartans and shawls; and at Bannockburn tweeds are produced, while in other towns and localities are calico printing works, large distilleries, tanneries, breweries, chemical and other establishments. At Grangemouth, 5 steamers of 5,838 net tonnage were built.

Rivers, Mountains and Railways.—The Forth is the principal river in Stirlingshire. It takes its rise from a spring near the summit of Ben Lomond, and, after receiving in its course the Teith, the Allan, and the Devon, expands into the estuary called the Firth of Forth. Between Stirling and Alloa, a distance of only 7 miles in a direct line, the stretch is more than 20 by the course of the river, owing to the numerous windings, which are termed "the links of the Forth." The next river in magnitude is the Carron, which has its source in the central district, and is navigable for vesels of large burthen for about 2 miles from the place where it forms a junction with the Forth. The other streams are the Avon, the Endrick, the Blank, and the Kelvin. Loch Lomond, a fine inland lake 23 miles in length by 5 in breadth at the widest part, to a little over 1 at the narrowest, extends from Balloch, 5 miles north of Dumbarton, to Ardlui, 2 miles south of Inverarnan, and contains several considerable islands, of which three principal ones, Inch Cruin, Inchfad and Inchcaelloch, belong to this county, and a line drawn from the lake shore 1 mile west of Buchannan Kirk, to the centre of the Loch, and thence continued northward, passing to the east of Inchlonaig, up the middle of the Loch to a point just east of Inchvow, above Inversnaid, forms the western boundary of the county; there is some fishing and the Loch is much frequented by tourists in search of scenery. Ben Lomond lies to the east, about half way up the Loch, and the western side is skirted by large mountains for most of its length. The Forth and Clyde canal and the Union canal pass through the county; the first named debouching at Grangemouth and the Union joining it from Edinburgh, at Falkirk. There are also numerous springs, but the most noted are the Airthrey Wells, at Bridge of Allan, the waters of which contain saline and other properties. The eminences of great altitude above the level of the sea are: Ben Lomond, 3,262 feet; Ben a Choin, 2,524; Maol Mohr, 2,200; Ben Bhreare, 1,922; Ben Uird, 1,957; and Earls Seat, Campsie Fells, 1,894 feet.

The railways running from Glasgow into the south of the county are the Alloa, Stirling and Perth branch of the North British line, which enters the county at Castlecary, and passing by Larbert and St. Ninians to Stirling, throws out a branch to Alloa, where it joins the line of the same railway from Stirling, via Dunfermline, to Edinburgh; there is another line from Glasgow and Yoker, entering the county at Summerston and running to Kilsyth, from whence a branch goes to Bonnybridge, and over this the Caledonian line runs to Larbert: the North British railway has also a branch from Lenzie Junction, via Kirkintilloch, running north-west, by Strathblane to Gartness, where it joins the line from Stirling to Balloch and from Buchlyvieon this latter line nearer to Stirling runs a branch to Aberfoyle; the only other line is that running north and north-west from Stirling to Doune and Callander, by Bridge of Allan: this belongs to the Caledonian railway.

Divisions, Representation &c.—Stirlingshire comprises 22 complete civil parishes and 35 complete and 4 parts of ecclesiastical parishes, in the synod of Perth and Stirling. It contains one royal burgh, Stirling, one municipal burgh, Falkirk, and four police burghs, Bridge of Allan, Denny and Dunnipace, Grangemouth and Kilsyth. Stirling, with Culross, Dunfermline and Inverkeithing in Fifeshire, and South Queensferry in Linlithgowshire, form the Stirling District of parliamentary burghs, and Falkirk, with Linlithgow in Linlithgowshire, and Airdrie, Hamilton and Lanark in Lanarkshire, the Falkirk District, each district returning one member to parliament. The county sends one representative. The parliamentary constituency in 1915 was 20,902.

AIRTH is a parish and village in the small debt court district of Falkirk, about 5 miles in length by about 1½ to 3 in breadth. The ancient village stands on the banks of the Forth, nearly opposite to Kennetpans, and has a station, 2 miles west, on the Larbert and Alloa branch of the Caledonian railway, and is 27 miles west from Edinburgh, between 8 and 9 south-west from Stirling and 6 north-west from Falkirk. It was at one period a place of considerable importance, but is now greatly decayed. The Pow burn, a tributary of the Forth, runs through the centre of the parish. There are three small ports or harbours on the Forth, into which vessels of light burthen can enter, and two ferries across that estuary, at which are boats for the transport of cattle, carriages &c. to Alloa and other places on the Fife side. Here are Established and United Free churches. The Episcopal church of St. Andrew at Dunmore affords 90 sittings. The Very Rev. George Grub F.S.A. has been rector since 1906. The salmon fishery is prosecuted here with considerable success. In the parish is an ancient tower, of very early date, called "Wallace's Tower," from the circumstance of that hero having privily entered the building, slain the captain and one hundred men, and released his uncle, who was a prisoner; the tower is still in tolerable preservation. At Dunmore is another tower, and at Dunmore Hill, at least half a mile from the present course of the river, an anchor was found some years since. This place, in 1633, conferred the title of Earl on the Grahams, Earls of Monteith; it became extinct in the male line on the death of the 2nd Earl, 12 Sept. 1694, but the Earldom of Monteith has several times been claimed, though unsuccessfully. The Carron Company has opened a coal pit on their estate of Letham, 1¼ miles south of the village, and has erected near it houses for officials and workmen. Airth Castle, the property of the Misses Graham, but now (1915) occupied by Robert McLaren esq. J.P. is an elegant mansion in the Gothic style standing in a park about 1 mile long by half a mile wide. Dunmore Park, about 1 mile long by half a mile wide, is the seat of Claud A. Hamilton esq. The Marquis of Zetland K.T., P.C. Alexander Nimmo Sherriff esq. The Carron Co. James J. Stainton Maclaren esq. James Victor Burn-Murdoch esq. and C. E. Walker Ogilvie esq. are the principal landowners. The whole parish, with the exception of the hills of Airth and Dunmore, is a level tract, and the soil rich and well cultivated. Acreage of parish, 5,561; rateable value, £12,456; population in 1911, 1,515.

BANNOCKBURN is a small town and quoad sacra parish erected from the civil parish of St. Ninians, 1 mile from that place, on the road from Falkirk to Stirling, and on both sides, but chiefly on the east bank of the Bannockburn rivulet, which here runs through a glen, and after a course of a few miles falls into the Forth. It has a station half a mile east on the Glasgow and Stirling section of the Caledonian railway, and is 3 miles south from Stirling and 8 north from Falkirk. There is an Established church, and United Free churches at Ladywell, Murrayfield and Cowie, and a Roman Catholic church. The manufacture of tweeds tartans, and carpets is carried on. Coal is obtained in the vicinity in great abundance. In this district the country is characterised by its long descending braes, with a northern exposure to the Firth of Forth, and it was on one of these up'lands, between this village and that of St. Ninians, that was fought on the 24th June, 1314, the memorable and decisive battle of Bannockburn; the result of which was the permanent security of the independence of Scotland. In this conflict the army of the English, under Edward II. and the Earls of Pembroke and Gloucester, numbering about 100,000 men, attempted to relieve Stirling Castle, then besieged by Robert Bruce, but was defeated with heavy loss, although the Scots numbered considerably less. Bruce's forces were stationed along the front of an eminence called Gillies Hill, and extended from south-west to north-east, between the farm of Greysteil and the village of St. Ninians. About half a mile south from the latter, upon the summit of a commanding elevation called Calden Hill, is a large stone, termed the "Bored Stone," having a hole in the top in which the Scottish king inserted his standard on the day of battle. The height called the Cat Craig Hill, from which the English king watched the progress of the battle, has been almost quarried away. At Milton, about half a mile from the town of Bannockburn, are the remains of "Beatons Mill," to which James III. retreated after the battle of Sauchieburn, fought in June, 1488, about 2 miles further to the south-west. There is a Public Hall in the village, erected at a cost of £1,700. The Fever Hospital here, erected in 1895 at a cost of about £3,000, and enlarged in 1903, is under the control of the County Central District Committee. A fair is held in Bannockburn on the third Tuesday in June (old style). Bannockburn town contained a population in 1911 of 3,968, and in the ecclesiastical parish, 8,465.

COWIE is a rapidly increasing village in the parish.

George Dundas esq.; the trustees of the late William Dawson esq. and Henry Burn Callander esq. are the principal landowners. The population in 1911 was 1,860.

BRIDGE OF ALLAN is a popular watering place on the river Allan, about 1½ miles from its confluence with the Forth, and nearly at the western extremity of the Ochill hills. It is a police burgh and quoad sacra parish erected from Logie civil parish, with a station on the main line of the Caledonian railway, and is 1½ miles north from Causewayhead station, which is in the parish, on the Stirling and Edinburgh line of the North British railway, and 3 north from Stirling, 13 north-by-west from Falkirk, and about 8 north-west from Alloa. The bridge from which the town takes its name crosses the river Allan near the entrance to the burgh. In 1870 Bridge of Allan was made a burgh under the provisions of the Lindsay Act; its municipal affairs are managed by a Town Council of nine councillors, who elect a provost and two bailies under the "Town Council (Scotland) Act, 1900." The higher part of the town in the neighbourhood of the wells and Coneyhill is of considerable elevation, forming a terrace or plateau, on which many villas are erected, and the sloping sides of the hill are adorned with trees, and command views of the vale of Menteith, Stirling, with its castle and carse, watered by the Forth, Teith and Allan, and other objects of interest. This place is resorted to as well for pleasure as on account of the bracing quality of its air and salubrity of the climate, the beauty of the surrounding scenery, and the fame of its saline mineral waters, which are in the higher village, within a few minutes' walk from the centre of the town; these springs, regarded as the chief saline waters in Scotland, contain 47½ grains of common salt in 16oz. and a nearly similar amount of muriate of lime. Prior to the discovery of the springs, the place was comparatively little known, but is now much patronised as a health resort, and in the summer months by tourists from all parts of the world: there are many well-built houses and villas, and several hotels, including the Royal Hotel, the Queen's Hotel, Carmichael's Private Hotel and Allan Water Hotel. There is a Parish church and two United Free churches. The Episcopal church of St. Saviour, built in 1857, will seat 200 persons: the rectory, net yearly value £339, has been held since 1911 by the Rev. John Arnott MacCulloch hon. D.D. of St. Andrews University. In the burgh are reading rooms and libraries, the M'Farlane gallery of sculpture and pictures and a bowling green. Airthrey Castle is the seat of Mrs. Graham. Both Airthrey Castle and Keir House are open once a week to the public, and there are also several miles of good angling, a good golf course and public tennis courts. The "Strathallan Meeting" for Scottish athletic games is held annually on the first Saturday of August, in the public park, at the east end of the village. Among the business establishments are the large cotton manufacturing works of Messrs. R. Pullar and Sons Limited, and a paper manufactory. The trustees of the late General Sir James E. Alexander K.C.B. and Mrs. Graham are owners of the manor. The area of the burgh is 774 acres; rateable value, £27,166; population of the burgh in 1911, 3,121, and in ecclesiastical parish 2,566.

Post, M. O. & T. & Telephonic Express Delivery Office; John H. Rose, postmaster. Letters should have Stirlingshire added. Deliveries, 7 & 11 a.m. (to callers) & 2.15 & 6.30 p.m.; dispatches, 11 a.m. & 3.40, 4, 5.45, 7.45 & 10.30 p.m.; sundays, 4 p.m.; open on sundays for telegraph & callers' letters from 9 to 10 a.m

BUCHANAN is a parish and village, in the western extremity of the county, in Dumbarton poor combination and the small debt court district of Stirling, about 19 miles in length by 2 to 5 in breadth, and bounded by Dumbartonshire and Perthshire and Drymen parish on the north, Loch Lomond on the west, by the river Endrick on the south, and by Drymen on the east. The river Forth rises in the district, at the back of Ben Lomond, and the Endrick waters intersect the parish. The village is about 4 miles north-west from Drymen station on the Stirling and Balloch section of the North British railway, 12 north from Dumbarton and 24 west-by-south from Stirling, and has an Established church. Loch Lomond is a large inland lake, 23 miles long by 5 broad at its widest part, and 1 at its narrowest point. The boundary line between the counties of Stirling and Dumbarton commences at the loch shore about 1 mile west of Buchanan kirk to the centre of the loch, and thence continues northwards to the west of Inchcruin Island, up the centre of the loch to a point just east of Vow Island. There are several islands in the lake, of which Buckinch, Caerdach, Inchcailloch, Inchfad and Inchcruin are included in Stirlingshire boundary: on Inchcailloch are the foundations of a church, 51 feet in length. At Rowardennan is a ferry to Inveruglas, in Dumbartonshire. There are several mountains in the parish, including Ben Lomond, 3,192 feet high; Ben a Choin, 2,524 feet; Ptarmigan, 2,398 feet; Mael Mor, 2,249 feet; Cruinn a Bheinn, 2,077 feet, and Ben Uird, 1,957 feet. Rob Roy's cave and prison are both in this parish. The Montrose Home, opened by the Duchess of Montrose in May, 1891, is at Balmaha, on the borders of Loch Lomond; the institution, the cost of which was entirely defrayed by the Duchess, is in connection with the Evangelistic Institute of Glasgow, and will hold 30 poor children, who are boarded for two weeks. Buchanan Castle, which occupies the site of the old residence destroyed by fire in 1850, is the seat of His Grace the Duke of Montrose K.T., A.D.C. lord lieutenant of the county; it stands on the margin of Loch Lomond, near the Fort of Inversnaid, and is surrounded by a large park. The castle obtained its present name from having, prior to 1682, when it was purchased by the Montrose family, belonged to the Buchanans, and the place has, since 1707, conferred the title of Marquess on the Dukes of Montrose. Acreage of the parish, 41,644; rateable value, £9,555; population, 1901, 487 and in 1911, 795.

BUCHLYVIE is a village and quoad sacra parish, formed from Kippen and Drymen civil parishes, and is in Stirling small debt court district and parliamentary voting district of Balfron. The village is on the road from Stirling to Dumbarton, and has a station, 1 mile north, on the Forth and Clyde section of the North British railway, which is also the junction of the Aberfoyle branch, and is 14 miles west from Stirling and 27 north from Glasgow. There are Established and United Free churches. From Port of Menteith station, which is in Kippen parish and on the same railway, the tourist may proceed to the Lake of Menteith, in Perthshire, in which are situated the islands of Inchmahome and Tulla; on the former are considerable remains of an Augustinian monastery, founded in 1238 by Walter (Comyn), Earl of Menteith, and dedicated to St. Colmoe; the ruins include the choir and nave of the church, together 151 feet in length: the east window is of five lancets under a single arch: on the north side of the nave are three pointed arches, two of which opened to a destroyed aisle or chapel, the other to a north-west tower: the west doorway has good mouldings, and on either side are two acutely-pointed blank arches: the style is generally of Early Gothic character. Many historical associations are connected with the place, among which may be mentioned the fact that Queen Mary retired here after the battle of Pinkie, 10 Aug. 1547, and planted a box-wood bower, part of which still remains. Here also Sir Walter Scott conceived the idea of writing his "Lady of the Lake." Arngibbon Glen, much frequented for the grandeur of the scenery, is in the neighbourhood. Population in 1911, 714 and in the village, 386. The village is becoming each year a more popular summer resort.

CAUSEWAYHEAD is a small village with a station on the central section of the North British railway; it is in the parish of Logie, about midway between Bridge of Allan and Stirling, at the foot of Abbey Craig—a detached portion of the Ochil range—which presents a precipitous front with a height of about 560 feet above the level of the Forth. On its most elevated ridge, and almost perpendicularly over the village, stands the Wallace monument, a structure 220 feet in height, in the form of a Scottish tower, surmounted by flying crocketed arches converging to a centre and forming a crown, from designs by Mr. Rochead, of Glasgow. The foundation stone was laid June 24th, 1861 (the anniversary of the Battle of Bannockburn), with masonic honours, by the Duke of Atholl. From the summit, which is reached by a spiral stair, the view obtained is rich in natural beauty and full of historic associations. Population estimated to be about 600.

Post Office; Miss Janet Bean, postmistress. Letters received through Stirling. Arrivals, 8 a.m. & 6.30 p.m.; dispatches, 7 a.m. 3.45 & 7.20 p.m.; sundays, 3.15 p.m. The nearest money order & telegraph offices are at Stirling & Bridge of Allan, each 2 miles distant

The parish is about 6 miles long, by an average of 4 in breadth, and is bounded on the south-west by the parish of Kilsyth, on the west and north by the Carron, and south-east by Falkirk. The town is on the road directly west from Falkirk, through the centre of the county, the road from Stirling to Glasgow also passing through, and is 29 miles west from Edinburgh, 19 north-east from Glasgow, 7 south from Stirling, and 5 west from Falkirk. Denny and Dunipace are controlled by a provost, a police judge, with two bailies and five commissioners. The Denny railway, opened in 1859, is a branch of the Scottish Central section of the Caledonian line, which joins the main line at Larbert, nearly 4 miles distant. The terminus is close to the town and from it run two sub-branches extending to the coal mines in the neighbourhood, by which the coal is conveyed to Glasgow and Grangemouth for shipment over the country generally, and near here is the Forth and Clyde canal. Here are Established, United Free and Roman Catholic churches and a Baptist chapel. Here are a large public hall, in which concerts and public meetings are held, and the Ancient Order of Foresters Hall, in which that society, the Oddfellows, the Free Gardeners, and the Freemasons hold their lodge meetings. There is also a People's Club, with a library, reading rooms and billiard rooms. The uncommon extent of the water power, as well as the purity of the Carron water have caused the establishment of considerable works on its margin, comprising paper and chemical works, and in the district are extensive coal mines and iron foundries, the whole furnishing employment to a large population

Places of interest in the neighbourhood are the Hermitage, Carron Glen, the ruins of Torwood Castle and the Lady's Leap. The banks of the Carron were the scene of many of the most interesting and heroic deeds recorded in Scottish history. Charles William Forbes esq. D.L., J.P. is the principal landowner. Acreage of the parish, 8,276; burgh, 480 acres; rateable value, landward, £39,177; police burgh of Denny and Dunipace, £16,921 (of which £13,825 is within Denny parish and £3,245 is within Dunipace parish); population in 1901, 8,268, and in 1911, 9,166; of the latter number the burgh of Denny and Dunipace contained 3,853, and Bonnybridge town, 1,693; population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1901, 4,701, and in 1911, 5,611.

BANKIER is a hamlet at the west end of the parish, and contains a distillery.

At HOLLAND BUSH, near Haggs, 15th August, 1645, was fought the battle of Kilsyth, in which Montrose defeated the Covenanters.

PARKFOOT and LONGCROFT is a village 2½ miles south-west from the village of Denny.

HAGGS is a quoad sacra parish and village in the south of this parish, 2½ miles west from Bonnybridge, 1½ west of Denny Loanhead, and 1 miles north of the Banknock station (which is in the parish) on the Glasgow and Bonnybridge section of the North British railway. Here is an Established church. The population in 1911 was 2,882.

DUNIPACE is a parish, divided into the four districts of Little Denovan, Meikle Denovan, Dunipace and Torwood, in Stirling small debt court district and is united to Larbert for ecclesiastical purposes. The parish is bounded on the north and west by the parish of St. Ninians, on the east by Larbert and on the south by the river Carron, which divides it from Denny. The village is situated on the road from Stirling to Glasgow and Falkirk, about 1 mile north from Denny terminal station on a branch from Larbert of the Glasgow and Stirling section of the Caledonian railway, 6 miles south from Stirling and 5 north-west from Falkirk. Dunipace is included in the police burgh of Denny and Dunipace, and has Established and United Free churches. This parish was formerly rich in minerals, and has an extension line to the mines of the Denny branch mineral railway, crossing the river Carron, which divides this and the adjoining parish of Denny. In this locality are two eminences called "the Hills of Dunipace," presumed to be sepulchral memorials. It was at Dunipace that Edward I. of England, on the 14th of October, 1301, signed a warrant to his ambassadors, then in France, authorising them to consent to a truce with the Scots as an indispensable preliminary towards a peace with their ally the French king, between whom and Edward a destructive war had long been waged. Dunipace House is the residence of John A. Harvie-Brown esq. J.P., F.Z.S., F.R.S.E. Edwin Bolton esq. J.P. John A. Harvie-Brown esq. and Charles W. Forbes esq. D.L., J.P. are the principal landowners. Acreage of the parish, 5,593; rateable value, £10,880; population in 1911 was 1,936.

FALKIRK

FALKIRK is an ancient town, parliamentary and police burgh, the principal town of the eastern district of the county, and a parish and the head of a poor combination; the extreme length of the parish is 9 miles, and its breadth from 2 to 5½; it is bounded on the north by Denny and Larbert, on the south by Slamannan and Muiravonside, on the east by Polmont, and on the west by Dumbartonshire. Falkirk has a station on the Edinburgh and Glasgow section of the North British railway, another at Grahamston on the same line, which is also used for the town, and a third on the Caledonian railway. The town is 24 miles west-by-north from Edinburgh, 22 north-east from Glasgow, 11 south-south-east from Stirling and 3 south-west from Grangemouth, and is situated on the face of an eminence, overlooking the broad expanse of country called "the Carse (or Kerse) of Falkirk," and commanding a most extensive prospect. Besides the rich and fertile "carse," the prospect includes the river Forth, the great canal, which intersects the county about half a mile north of the town; and to the south Callander wood, shrouding a rising ground a short distance from the town.

The port of Grangemouth, about 3 miles to the north-east of Falkirk, is connected with the burgh by a branch of the Caledonian Railway.

The Union canal joins the Forth and Clyde canal about a mile west from the town, but its trade is limited, it having been purchased by the Edinburgh and Glasgow Railway Company. About half a mile south of the town it passes through a tunnel 796 yards in length.

The Falkirk and Larbert Water Trust introduced in 1890 a supply of water from the Denny Hills, at a cost of about £80,000, and under later Acts, passed in 1896, 1900 and 1908, extensions were carried out at a cost of about £180,000.

The town is partly lighted with gas supplied by the Town Council, who purchased the works in February, 1895, from a private company; in 1905 new works were erected at Grahamston; the town is also lighted by electricity installed in 1902 at Parkfoot by the Town Council.

In 1905 electric trams, with a station and offices at Larbert, commenced running, on a circular route, linking up Camelon, Larbert, Carron, Bainsford and Grahamston with Falkirk.

Falkirk was created a burgh of barony in the reign of James I. and a burgh of regality in the reign of Charles I. but no baron bailie has been appointed for many years. A body of "stent masters, chosen by the different trades of the town, formerly managed its affairs, but that body being abolished by Act of Parliament, their powers and property were transferred to the magistrates. The town is now governed under the Town Councils and Burgh Police (Scotland) Acts of 1892-1903 by a provost, four bailies and ten councillors.

Falkirk, with Airdrie, Hamilton, Lanark and Linlithgow, form a parliamentary district, under the title of the Falkirk Burghs, returning one member.

Justice of peace courts and petty sessions are held. A sheriff court was first opened at Falkirk in 1834, for the eastern district of the county, comprising the parishes of Falkirk, Grangemouth, Muiravonside, Slamannan, Larbert and Airth.

The old church of Falkirk, mostly taken down in 1810, is believed to have been founded by St. Modan. The name of the town owes its origin to the church, and the Highlanders still call it by the old Celtic name of "Eglaise Bhreac," or "Eaglais Brace," or spotted church, which is synonymous with the old Saxon name "Fawkirk," bearing the same meaning. The present church, erected under the superintendence of Mr. George Watson and the Rev. Dr. Anderson, Edinburgh, incorporates the tower of the ancient fabric: the old south aisle, formerly in the possession of the Knights of St. John of Jerusalem, and endowed by them, has also been rebuilt. The total cost of these alterations, including a new organ, was about £4,000. The Kirk Session Records, which extend as far back as 1617, mention the fact that a marble tablet, which is now inserted in the tower, was found when the old church was taken down. It bears the following inscription:

FVNDATVM
MALCOLMO III.
REGE SCOTIÆ.
A M † 1057.

In the churchyard lie the remains of Sir John de Græhame (the friend of Wallace) and Sir John Stuart, who were slain on the memorable field of Falkirk, in 1298; a plain coffin-shaped stone marks the grave of the latter, and a former Marquess of Bute erected a granite cross to the west of the church, to the memory of the men of Bute who were slain with their chief, Sir John Stuart. There is also a monument to Sir John de Graime, surrounded by a railing, surmounted by a Gothic cupola. A bronze casting of the two-handed sword used by this hero has been affixed to the tomb. In the same cemetery stands a monument, erected by Robert Dollar esq. of San Francisco, and a native of Falkirk, to Sir Robert Munro, of Foulis, and his brother, Dr. Munro, who fell in the second battle of Falkirk, between the forces of the Pretender and the Duke of Cumberland, January 17th, 1746; a memorial has also been erected to William Edmondston, of Cambus Wallace, Captain-Lieutenant of the 17th Regiment of Foot, who fell in battle, near Falkirk, 27th January, 1746, and there is another in memory of Mr. Dollar's mother, who was buried in the same grave.

St. Andrew's United Free church, in Newmarket street, erected about 1896, at a cost of £7,200, is a building of red freestone, in the Gothic style, with a tower and spire, and will seat 950 persons. There is also a Roman Catholic church and Baptist, Congregational and Wesleyan chapels and several mission halls. The Episcopal church, called Christ Church, built in 1864, affords 266 sittings, and attached is a Mission church at Grangemouth; the Rev. William Henry Jenkins B.A. of Hatfield Hall, Durham, has been rector since 1915.

All the burial grounds being now closed, a cemetery has been provided, about a mile west of the town, for the entire parish; it embraces an area of 14 acres, and was enlarged in 1899 by an addition of 22 acres.

The County Buildings, erected in 1868, in lieu of the old court house, are in Hope street, and include court rooms for the sheriff and justices, and a procurator's room. At the same time a prison and county police office were built, and Burgh buildings were erected in Newmarket street in 1878. The Eastern district of the County Council of Stirlingshire have offices in West end, erected in 1904.

The Exchange, or Corn Market, originally built in 1859, was replaced by the present hall in 1878. The Corn Market is now held in the Town Hall.

Falkirk derives its chief importance from being the seat of an extensive iron trade, which is still rapidly increasing. The number of foundries in the burgh has increased from 1 in 1848 to 11 in 1898, and in the immediate neighbourhood there are nearly a dozen others. In addition to these there are many collieries in the district, several large chemical works, a distillery and a brewery.

Falkirk is within a very populous district, with no large town in the immediate neighbourhood, and commands an extensive inland trade, and the various iron and other works (from which the town derives material support) render it the market town for between 50 and 60 thousand people.

The market for grain is held on Thursday; there is a weekly sale of fat stock every Tuesday and of store stock on Thursday at the repository of Messrs. Binnie Limited.

The days for hiring servants are the first Thursday in April, and the last Thursday in October, which are called feeing Thursdays.

There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland, the Clydesdale Bank Limited, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the Royal Bank of Scotland, the British Linen Bank, and the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited, as well as a Savings Bank.

In the town is a tower 146 feet high, containing a clock and 2 bells. In Newmarket street is an equestrian statue of the great Duke of Wellington, erected in 1854 by public subscription. A statue was unveiled by the late F.M. Earl Roberts V.C., K.G., K.P. in 1906, in memory of the officers and men of the Eastern District of Stirlingshire who fell during the South African war in 1899-1902.

Falkirk is historically famous as being the scene of two memorable battles; the first, between Edward I. of England and the Scots, under Sir William Wallace, was fought July 22, 1298, on the level ground to the north of the town, and, mainly through the havoc created by the English archers, resulted in the total defeat of the Scots, and sealed the fate of Wallace, who never recovered his position, and was ultimately executed on Tower Hill, 23 Aug. 1305; the second conflict took place Jan. 17, 1746, on high ground south-west of the town, between the young Pretender, Prince Charles Edward, and the English forces under General Hawley, who was defeated with the loss of guns and baggage and retreated into Falkirk, and thence to Linlithgow and Edinburgh.

Callendar House, the seat of Charles William Forbes esq. D.L., J.P. is pleasantly situated in a well-wooded park of 800 acres: in the park is a mausoleum. South Bantaskin is the residence of the Misses Wilson. Charles William Forbes esq. D.L., J.P. the Marquess of Zetland K.T., P.C., D.L., J.P. and the trustees of the late John Wilson, of South Bantaskin, are the principal landowners.

The area of the entire civil parish is 15,111 acres; burgh, 1,670 acres; rateable value, landward, £50,410; burghal, £148,184; population of the parish in 1901, 36,628, and in 1911, 42,423, as follows:—Falkirk Burgh (municipal), 33,575; Grangemouth Burgh (part of), 230, landward 5,847. Included in the total population were 8 officials and 199 inmates of the Poorhouse.

In 1911 the population of the wards were:—First, 6,332; second, 5,822; third, 6,279; fourth, 7,962; fifth, 7,179.

The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911 was 21,130; the population of the parliamentary borough in 1911 was 22,016. The number of electors on the Falkirk parliamentary register in 1915 was 3,497.

CAMELON is a quoad sacra parish, formed in 1852, from Falkirk civil parish, and was incorporated in the borough of Falkirk under the Falkirk Borough Gas and Extension Act of 1900. It lies on the road from Falkirk to Stirling and the Forth and Clyde canal, and consists principally of one street, with a joint station on the Scottish Central section of the North British railway and on the Larbert and Grangemouth branch of the Caledonian railway. The parish church is a plain stone edifice, built in 1839, and has about 600 sittings; there are also two United Free churches and a Wesleyan Methodist chapel, erected in 1906. In the vicinity there are several foundries and extensive chemical works. Camelon is a place of considerable interest to the antiquary, and was represented by the early writers as a maritime city, in corroboration of which assertion fragments of anchors, blocks of stone with rings attached, and even an entire boat of ancient model, have been found embedded in the soil. The city, it is alleged, was built by Vespasian (A.D. 69-79), and when subsequently possessed by the Picts, had twelve brazen gates: no vestige, however, of this magnificent place remains except one portion of a wall, visible from the Glasgow road. The sea is now about 4 miles distant. The population in 1911 was 7,724.

GRAHAMSTON is a quoad sacra parish in the burgh of Falkirk, and separated therefrom only by the line of the Caledonian railway. There are Established and United Free churches and a Wesleyan chapel. The population in 1911 was 9,693.

BAINSFORD is a small village in Falkirk parish, 1 mile from the town hall, on the Larbert high road, and has a United Free church and a Mission hall.

LAURIESTON (or Lawriestoun) is a village in the parish of Falkirk, about 1 mile east from that town, and has Established and United Free churches. Nail making, formerly carried on to a considerable extent, is now extinct. The place was originally called Langtoun, afterwards Merchiston, and is now named Lauriestor, in honour of the late Sir Lawrence Dundas, who made considerable additions to and much improved it.

FINTRY is a parish pleasantly situated to the north of the Campsie Fells, in the small debt court district of Stirling, extending from east to west 6 miles, and averaging in breadth, from north to south, about 5 miles; it is bounded on the north by Balfron and Gargunnock, on the east by St. Ninians and Kilsyth, on the south by Campsie and on the west by Killearn. The village is 7 miles west from Balfron station on the Stirling and Balloch section of the North British railway, and 8 north from Lennoxtown station on the Glasgow and Aberfoyle line of the same railway, and is 41 miles west from Edinburgh, 16 west-south-west from Stirling and 18 north from Glasgow. Here is an Established church. Both the Endrick and the Carron rivers have their source in this district, and in their course through it form several romantic falls, among which is the Loup of Fintry, a cataract of the Endrick descending 91 feet: on the Carron is another of about 112 feet, called the "Auchinlily Linn Spout." Near the village of Fintry is a hill called the "Doon," on which is a range of perpendicular basaltic columns, some 50 feet in length. Bin Mountain, 1,870 feet high, and Stroned, 1,676 feet, are in the parish, and Dunmore hill, 1,126 feet, overlooks the village. Craigton is the seat of Mrs. Gibb and Culcreuch, which was the ancient residence of the Galbraiths, of James Menzies esq. The Duke of Montrose K.T. Mrs. Gibb and James Menzies esq. are the principal landowners. Acreage of parish, 13,788; rateable value, £3,992; population in 1901, 315 and 1911, 288.

GRANGEMOUTH

THIS is a police burgh and civil parish, 3 miles north from Falkirk, 27 north-north-west from Edinburgh and 25 north-east from Glasgow, situated on the Firth of Forth, at the junction of the river Carron with the Clyde and Forth canal, and is governed by a provost, two bailies, and six councillors, under the "Town Councils (Scotland) Act, 1903." The ecclesiastical parish was formed from the parishes of Bothkenna, Falkirk and Polmont. The town is lighted with gas from works now the property of the Town Council, and purchased from the Grangemouth Gas Co. Limited, in May, 1906, at a cost of £28,000, and by electric light, supplied by the Scottish Central Electric Power Co. A branch railway, which joins the North British at Falkirk, was constructed in 1859, thus connecting the port with the railway system of the country. The Caledonian Railway Company has also a branch line, which joins their main line at Larbert. This port was commenced in 1777 by Sir Lawrence Dundas, for the shipping passing through the canal to and from the Clyde and Glasgow, of which it is the natural eastern port: its growth is attributable to the moderate rate of charges, as well as to the facilities for vessels of the largest tonnage: the canal rates of toll are also low: the wet dock, opened in 1843, affords room for nearly 20,000 tons of shipping. Docks of nearly 60 acres in extent were opened on the 3rd of June, 1882, and of this area 19½ acres represents the water area of the dock and timber basins, the actual dockage area being about 10½ acres. New docks of 30 acres, begun about 1899, were opened 8th Oct. 1906, at an estimated cost of £1,500,000. There is an Established church, and one at Kerse, four United Free churches, and a Roman Catholic church. The Episcopal Mission church of St. Mary is an iron structure and is served from Falkirk. The Town Hall, erected at a cost of about £5,500, has a large hall capable of seating 1000 persons: there are also included in the building town clerk's and surveyor's chambers, a council room and small hall for committee meetings. The Victoria Library was erected in 1887, at a cost of about £1,800, including site, one half of the sum being presented by Mrs. Carnegie, the other being raised by voluntary contributions and assessment. The Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the Bank of Scotland, the Royal Bank of Scotland and the British Linen Bank have branches here. A public park of 8½ acres, granted by the Marquess of Zetland K.T., P.C. was opened in 1882. The area of the civil parish is 8,046 acres: rateable value, £133 530: area of burgh, 1,667 acres: the population in 1901 was 17,463, and in 1911, 19,470, of which 9,989 were in police burgh (including 430 shipping). KILLEARN is a parish in Stirling poor combination and small debt court district, and is 12 miles long by an average breadth of 2½, the river Endrick, with the parish of Balfron, forming its northern boundary. It is bounded on the east by Fintry, on the south by Strathblane and the parish of New Kilpatrick, and on the west by Drymen, in Dumbartonshire. The land is fertile, and is watered by the Endrick and the Blane. The village is almost in the centre of the parish, in a pleasant part of the country, and has two railway stations, Dumgoyne, about 2 miles south-west, and Killearn, 1½ miles west, on the Glasgow and Aberfoyle section of the North British railway, 30 miles west from Edinburgh, 20 south-west from Stirling, and nearly 17 north-by-west from Glasgow. The village is supplied with water by Alexander Buchanan esq. The church, a handsome structure, was built by the late Sir Archibald Orr-Ewing bart. of Ballikinrain, in memory of his daughter, at a cost of £8,000, and presented to the parish. The old church is now used as a public hall. There is also a United Free church. The minerals in the district are chiefly limestone and freestone, and beautiful specimens of jasper are occasionally met with among the fragments of basaltic columns which abound here. The woods produce great numbers of indigenous plants. Considerable interest is attached to this part of the country as having been the birthplace or residence of men eminent in the biography of Scotland. In its more secluded recesses, Sir William Wallace was known to have occasionally found a retreat, and it was the birthplace, in Feb. 1506, of George Buchanan, the celebrated poet and historian, tutor to James VI. and principal of St. Leonard's College, St. Andrews; he was born at a place called The Moss, a small farmhouse on the bank of the Water of Blane, about 2 miles from the village of Killearn, and died 5 December, 1582. In the village is an obelisk of freestone, 19 feet square at the base and 103 feet in height, erected to his memory in 1788. Ballikinrain Castle is the seat of Sir Charles W. Cayzer bart. J.P. and Killearn House of Lt.-Col. Peter Blackburn. Acreage of the parish, 15,375; rateable value, £22,368; population (1911). 1,085.

NEW KILPATRICK, a parish, formerly partly included in this county, was, in 1891, wholly transferred to the county of Dumbarton, which see.

KILSYTH is a town, police burgh and parish, in the small debt court district of Lennoxtown. The parish is about 7 miles in length, and 1½ in breadth. In form it is an irregular oblong, bounded by the river Carron on the north, which separates it from St. Ninians, Fintry on the north-west, Cumbernauld and Kirkintilloch, in Dumbartonshire, on the south, Denny on the east, and Campsie on the west. It is watered by the Carron and Kelvin rivers. The Garrel Burn, a tributary of the Kelvin, intersects the parish and burgh. The Banton Loch and Burnhead reservoirs of the Forth and Clyde canal are in the parish. Railway communication with Glasgow was opened here in 1878, through the Blane Valley section of the North British line, and there is a line from Larbert on the Caledonian railway. The town is on the main road from Stirling to Glasgow, 35 miles west from Edinburgh, 15 south-south west from Stirling, between 12 and 13 north-north-east from Glasgow, and nearly 12 west-by-south from Falkirk, and is governed by a provost, two bailies and six town councillors. Here is an Established church, two United Free churches, a Roman Catholic church, and Congregational and Wesleyan chapels. The Cottage Hospital, for Kilsyth and district, erected at a cost of £2,000, was opened in May, 1903, and contains 12 beds; it is supported by voluntary subscriptions. The public buildings include a Town Hall, the Victoria Hall and the Unionist Rooms. Here are branches of the Royal Bank of Scotland and the National Bank of Scotland Limited and a Savings Bank. A police and justice of the peace court is held every Monday. About the middle of the parish is a hill, 1,393 feet high, which exhibits a fine specimen of basaltic columns. The parish is stocked with coal and ironstone and the working of these and whinstone quarrying form the main industries. Hand weaving, formerly the staple industry, is almost extinct. There are golf links and a bowling green. The parish also contains 2 small villages, Banton to the east of the burgh and Chapelgreen to the west. There is whinstone and freestone quarrying at Barwood, Auchenstarry, Colzium, Neilston, Beltmoss, and the Glen quarries. In this parish is a new reservoir for the supply of water to Lenzie, Kirkintilloch and Waterside, constructed about 1906, at a cost of £24,000. Kilsyth formerly gave the title of viscount to the unfortunate family of Livingstone, attainted in 1715 for their attachment to the house of Stuart; in Kilsyth church, the burial place of this family, the bodies of Jean, wife of William, 3rd and last Viscount Kilsyth, and her infant son lay embalmed for many years, and were identified on the examination of the grave in 1795; the last viscount died an exile at Rome, 12 Jan. 1733. In 1637, near the village, the Covenanters, commanded by General Baillie, were defeated by Montrose. Colziun House, at present occupied by Hugh Moncrieff esq. is the property of Sir Archibald Edmonstone bart. C.V.O. who is the principal landowner. The Duke of Montrose K.T. Henry M. Caddell esq. James and Thomas Lennie and Messrs. William Baird and Co. are also landowners. Acreage of the civil parish, 13,123; burgh, 280 acres; valuation of the parish, landward, £34,438; burghal, £22,969; population in 1901, 9,810, and in 1911, 11,052, the town numbering 8,106; ecclesiastical parish, population in 1911, 9,559. The population of the municipal wards in 1911 was, North, 2,502; East, 2,381; West, 3,223.

BANTON and MALLINS form a village in Kilsyth civil parish. Banton is a quoad sacra parish. Population in 1911, 1,133.

CHAPELGREEN, 1½ miles west, and Banton, about 2 east, are hamlets in this parish. The former has a station called GAVELL, on the Glasgow and Kilsyth section of the North British railway. For the latter the nearest station is Colzium, on the Larbert and Kilsyth line of the Kilsyth and Bonnybridge railway.

LARBERT (or Larbet) is a parish and village in Falkirk small debt court district, 3½ miles broad by 3 long, and bounded on the north by St. Ninians, north-east by Airth, east by Bothkennar, south by the river Carron, which divides it from Falkirk, and west by Dunipace. The village is situated on the side of a hill, on the northern bank of the Carron, and on the road from Falkirk to Stirling, and has a station on the Glasgow and Stirling section of the Caledonian railway: it is 3 miles west from Falkirk and 8 south-south-east from Stirling. The civil parish of Dunipace is included in Larbert ecclesiastical parish. The present Established church, erected in 1822, from designs of Mr. Hamilton, of Glasgow, is an edifice of stone in the Tudor Gothic style, with a square tower containing one bell, and has upwards of 1,000 sittings. There is also a United Free church. Half a mile north is the hamlet of North Broomage, near which is the Scottish National Institution for the Education of Imbecile Children. In this locality is also the Stirling District Asylum for the counties of Stirling, Dumbarton, Linlithgow and Clackmannan. In July, 1893, a new hospital was opened, at a cost of £20,000, and in 1895-6 a large addition was made, and a home for 80 nurses was erected in 1907, at a cost of £9,000; further additions are now (1915) in course of erection at a cost of £20,000, and when complete the hospital will provide for 950 patients. Here are two iron foundries and a large saw mills. Near this place the great Roman road or causeway passes, and about a quarter of a mile to the west the foundation of a bridge is visible when the Carron river is low. Kinnaird House, standing in a park of 120 acres, is now the residence of Mrs. Orr: it formerly belonged to James Bruce, the celebrated traveller, who was born in this house 14 Dec. 1730, and died here 27 April, 1794; his remains are interred in the parish churchyard, and a monument of iron, cast at Carron, is erected over his grave. Carron Hall is now (1915) unoccupied. Mrs. Sherriff, Sir John H. N. Graham bart. and the trustees of T. G. Dundas are the principal landowners. Acreage of the parish, 3,971; rateable value, £51,340; population in 1901, 11,684, and in 1911, 12,984, including 4,891 in Stenhousemuir Ward. Included in the total population were 112 officials and their families and 339 inmates of the Scottish National Institution for Imbecile Children and 165 officials and their families and 732 inmates of Stirling District Asylum. The population of the Larbert Ward in 1911 was 4,507 and of Larbert and Dunipace ecclesiastical parish, 11,413.

STENHOUSEMUIR is a small town and quoad sacra parish, called "Stenhouse," formed Dec. 2nd, 1904, from Larbert and Dunipace; the town forms a continuation of Larbert, and contains Established and United Free churches, a Calvinistic chapel and several Mission halls, besides a Public Library, erected in 1904, partly by the munificence of A. Carnegie esq. of Skibo Castle. Dobbie Hall, Stenhousemuir, was presented to the parish by Major Robert Dobbie, and will seat 1,000 persons. The cemetery of 8 acres was purchased by the Parish Council in 1901, and is under their control. Population of Stenhousemuir in 1911, 4,891, and Stenhouse ecclesiastical parish, 3,441.

LOGIE is a parish, in the small debt court district of Stirling, and is bounded on the north-west by Perthshire, east by Clackmannanshire and south by the river Forth. Under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary orders 124 and 127, a part of Logie parish in Perthshire has been transferred to Logie, and parts of Logie in Clackmannanshire have been transferred to the parish of Alloa and Alva, and those portions of Logie parish formerly in the counties of Clackmannan and Perth have been added to Stirlingshire, the whole parish of Logie is therefore now in the latter county. The kirk is about 3 miles from Stirling station on the North British and Caledonian railway, and the same distance from Bridge of Allan station on the Caledonian railway. The village of Blairlogie is very agreeably situated at the base of the Ochil hills, and is a favourite resort in summer for visitors from the large towns. There are Established and United Free churches. The remains of Cambuskenneth Abbey, founded in 1147, by King David I. for Augustine canons, stand near here on the north bank of the Forth, and about 1 mile east of Stirling; some of the materials were used in the building of the structure called "Mar's Work," in Stirling, James VI. having given the abbey to the Earl of Mar at the Reformation: but the massive detached tower still remains nearly perfect: the foundations of the church have been excavated so as to disclose the plan and extent of the buildings, and during the progress of this work the body of James III. killed at Sauchieburn, 11 June, 1488, and here buried, was discovered and reinterred in a new tomb near the site of the high altar, the expense being borne by Her late Majesty Queen Victoria, who had an inscription detailing the particulars placed on the tomb. About 1 mile north of the abbey stands the Wallace Monument, a lofty stone tower of 4 rooms, which contain relics of the hero, including his sword from Dumbarton, busts of other Scottish worthies, and various curiosities; on the outside, in front, is a bronze statue of Wallace, who defeated the English at the battle of Stirling Bridge, near this spot, 12 Sept. 1297. The principal landowners are Mrs. Graham, H. J. H. Barbor esq. Lieut.-Col. James Hare, and the trustees of the late Gen. Sir J. E. Alexander K.C.B. The area of the parish is 9,090 acres; rateable value, landward, £ ; burghal (Bridge of Allan), £ : population in 1911, 4373, viz.: Bridge of Allan police burgh, 3,121; landward, 1,252: population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911, 1,419, of which 59 are in Clackmannanshire.

REDDING MUIRHEAD, see POLMONT.

ST. NINIANS is a town and parish, in Stirling poor combination and small debt court district. The form of the parish is irregular; in extent it may be computed at about 12 miles from east to west and about 6 from north to south, and is bounded on the east by the parish of Airth, on the south by Dunipace and the river Carron, which separates it from Denny and Kilsyth, on the west by Fintry and Gargunnock, and on the north by the river Forth, which separates it from Kincardine, Lecropt, Logie and Alva (if a small space occupied by the parish of Stirling be excepted). Under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 118, a part of St. Ninians parish has been transferred to Stirling, and a part of that parish added to St. Ninians. Subsequently, by an order of the Secretary for Scotland, the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1894," the town was incorporated with Stirling burgh: it is on the road from that place to Falkirk and Glasgow, 2 miles south from Stirling, and consists of one long and rather narrow street, the houses of which are curious and old-fashioned, and many of which retain the dates of their erection, and some are rudely and grotesquely carved. There is an Established church, two United Free churches and a Mission Hall. Well-cultivated grounds and thriving plantations abound in the vicinity. The parish derives its name from the patron saint of the ancient church, the steeple of which still remains, but the rest of the fabric, being used as a powder magazine by the Highlanders in 1746, was blown up immediately before their retreat to the north. The manufacture of nails has for a long time been carried on at St. Ninians; other industries are the manufacture of screw bolts, and there are also coal mines. Earls Burn, a feeder of the Carron, and Bannock Burn, a tributary of the Forth, both rise in the western part of the parish, in which are also Earls Hill, 1,443 feet high, and Hart Hill, 1,428 feet. Polmaise Castle, the seat of Major Alastair Bruce Murray D.L., J.P., C.C.; Sauchie-Burn House, of Arthur Herbert Drummond Ramsay-Steel-Maitland esq. M.P., J.P.; Touch House, of Sir Douglas Archibald Seton-Steuart bart. J.P. and Craigforth House, of James Couper esq. J.P. are in this parish. Major Alastair Bruce Murray D.L., J.P., C.C., A. H. D. Ramsay-Steel-Maitland esq. M.P. Sir Douglas Archibald Seton-Steuart bart. Sir Michael Hugh Shaw-Stewart bart. D.L., J.P. Edwin Bolton esq. James Mitchell esq. the Duke of Montrose K.T. and the trustees of William Simpson's Asylum are the principal landowners. The area of the civil parish is 37,543 acres; rateable value, £114,965; population in 1901, 8,152, and in 1911, 13,888, viz.:—Bannockburn, 3,968; and landward, 9,900.

SLAMANNAN is a parish, lying on the south bank of the river Avon, and extending along the margin of that stream for about 5 miles, its breadth being from 3 to 4 miles; it is in the small debt court district of Falkirk; there has been added in 1895 a portion taken from the parish of Falkirk extending along the north bank of the Avon. Near the north-west end of the parish there is a point where the shires of Stirling, Dumbarton and Lanark meet, and at the south-west end the shires of Stirling and Lanark meet that of Linlithgow. On the southern boundary of the district is a small lake called Black Loch, which in part supplies the great reservoir for the Forth and Clyde canal. The village is on the road from Linlithgow to Glasgow, with a station close to it on the Glasgow, Coatbridge and Manuel section of the North British railway, 6 miles south-west from Falkirk and 10 south-west from Linlithgow. The Established church, erected about the beginning of the 19th century, is a plain edifice of stone, with a small tower containing one bell, and has about 600 sittings. Here also is a United Free church, and a Baptist chapel. In the village is a branch of the Bank of Scotland. A considerable portion of the land is arable; the remainder consists of bog and moss. Alexander Peddie-Waddell esq. D.L., J.P. John Motherwell Alston esq. Messrs. Aitken Brothers and Mrs. Paton are the principal landowners. Acreage of the parish, 10,856; rateable value, £17,218; population in 1911, 3,440.

AVONBRIDGE is a small village partly in the parish of Slamannan and partly in that of Muiravonside and Torpichen, about 4 miles east of Slamannan and 7 miles south-east from Falkirk, with a station on the Glasgow, Coatbridge and Manuel section of the North British railway, and has a United Free church and a Congregational chapel.

LIMERIGG and Loch-side form a village in Slamannan civil parish. At Limerigg is a Roman Catholic church and a Mission church.

STIRLING

STIRLING is a royal burgh. Its first mention in a royal charter is in a grant by King David I. to the church of Dunfermline, dated 1124-7. The first charter in favour of the burgh is by King Alexander II. dated 18th August, 1226. Stirling is the head burgh of the Stirling district of parliamentary burghs. It is also the county town of Stirlingshire.

The town of Stirling, one of the most ancient in Scotland, is picturesquely situated on a rocky eminence beside the river Forth. On three sides the hill falls in a precipitous cliff, the old town is clustered on the steep slope of the fourth side, while the Castle crowns the summit. The new town is laid out on comparatively level ground to the south and west. To the north and east of the town the river winds across the plain in a series of gigantic loops, known as the "links of Forth." On the north of the plain lies the steep front of the Ochils, on the south are the Touch Hills, while away in the west are the jagged summits of the Grampians.

The early history of Stirling is lost in antiquity. It is said to have been a Roman station, but of this there is little proof. The Roman road passed close to the base of the Castle rock. From the accession of Alexander I. who died at Stirling in 1124, down to the union of the Crowns, Stirling was one of the chief towns of the kingdom, and during most of that time was a royal residence.

Stirling abounds in old buildings and places of historical interest. The Castle was a favourite residence of the Stuart kings. It contains a group of buildings still well preserved. The Palace, begun by James IV. and completed by James V. and his widow Mary of Guise, forms a square surrounding a central courtyard, known as the Lions' Den. The walls of the palace are richly ornamented by columns and statuary figures of grotesque design. The Parliament House, erected by James III. is a magnificent building, the grand hall being 125 feet in length, although now divided off to form barracks. Immediately adjoining is the Chapel Royal, founded by James III. The mint, or ancient coining house, is one of the oldest portions of the castle. A short distance from the castle is the mansion built by Sir William Alexander, afterwards Earl of Stirling. Near is an interesting rum, with quaint inscriptions, known as Mar's Work, the old town house of the Earls of Mar. The old Tolbooth is in Broad street; it is a plain building with a lofty tower and lantern, and contains a chime of bells. In front is the old Mercat Cross, restored in 1891, and consisting of a shaft raised on four steps and surmounted by the figure of a unicorn. The remains of the Greyfriars and Blackfriars monasteries in Stirling have now disappeared. Other interesting relics are the Guild Hall, or Cowane's Hospital, in the Jacobean style, with its quaint Dutch garden and bowling green, the town wall, the King's Knot or "Table Round," the Royal Gardens and the ruins of Cambuskenneth Abbey.

The Parish Church is built on a commanding site above the town. When the earliest church was built here is not known, but by 1153 a church was standing, which David I. granted to the Abbey of Dunfermline. This building was burnt down in 1405, after which the present nave was erected. The choir was erected in 1507 to take the place of a smaller choir built at the same time as the nave. At the western end is a tower, 85 feet high, containing 4 ancient bells. The nave is Early English, with rounded pillars, round arched clerestory, and original timber roof in beautiful preservation, the general effect being massive, simple and dignified. Three chapels were attached, only one of which, St. Andrew's chapel, is perfect, and shows part of the 12th century building. The style of the choir is Perpendicular, and it possesses a peculiar interest from the fact that it was one of the last ecclesiastical buildings erected in Scotland prior to the Reformation. The most impressive portion of the exterior is the eastern apse, the tall buttresses of which spring from a lower level and are carried higher than the adjoining choir. In the churchyard adjoining are the Ladies' Rock, an old sundial, monuments to Scots martyrs and ecclesiastical leaders, the tombstone of Burns' "Black Russell" and the grave of Professor Henry Drummond.

St. Ninian's parish church is a plain structure, and in the old churchyard adjoining are the quaint tower and part of the building of the former church, blown up accidentally by the Jacobites in 1746. There are also the North and and Marykirk Established churches. There are eight United Free churches, also Congregational, Baptist and Wesleyan churches. The Episcopal church of Holy Trinity, Albert place, erected in 1878, will seat 546 persons, and attached is St. Ninian's Mission church: the rectory, net value £400, has been held since 1905 by the Rev. Robert Percival Brown M.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge. The Roman Catholic church, in Upper Bridge street, is a handsome modern building.

The present Municipal Buildings are at the top of King street, but a new block of buildings is now (1915) in course of erection at Corn Exchange road. The western portion will be completed first, at a cost of over £25,000, and will comprise the council chamber, provost's room, committee rooms, and the offices of the various burgh officials. The eastern portion will then be erected, including police court room, police offices, fire station, Corn Exchange hall and other premises.

On the Dumbarton road is a statue to the late Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, M.P. for Stirling Burghs 1868-1908, and Prime Minister of England. Also near it is another to Roberts Burns; this was presented by Provost Bayne in 1914.

The Public Libraries Acts were adopted in 1898, and the Library building, costing £7,000, granted by Mr. Andrew Carnegie, was opened in 1904. It comprises on the main floor a lending library, ladies' room and reading room, and a reference library and committee room above. The Macfarlane Library, with its endowment, has been transferred to the Public Library.

The Arcade, a glass-roofed thoroughfare between Murray place and King street, was built in 1892, and includes, besides shops, the Douglas Hotel and three halls, the largest of which seats 1,200 persons and is licensed for stage plays.

The Public Hall, in Dumbarton road, was erected in 1883, at a cost of about £12,000, and includes a large hall, licensed and fitted for dramatic performances and seating 1,400 persons, and containing an organ, provided at a cost of £2,300; there is also a smaller hall, seating 300, with retiring and cloak rooms and a keeper's apartments.

The County Buildings, in Barnton street, erected in 1874 and enlarged in 1911, comprise a justiciary court room, sheriff and justice of peace court rooms, County Council offices, law library, and the offices and cells of the County Constabulary. Opposite is a fountain of granite erected in honour of the Jubilee of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria.

The Smith Institute, in Dumbarton road, erected in 1873, was founded, at a cost of £5,000, by the late Thomas Stuart Smith, of Glassingall, who also left funds for its future maintenance; the Town Council gave the site, and the building embraces a museum and a picture gallery, open free to the public, and controlled by trustees.

The Stirling Royal Infirmary, founded about 1873, was greatly enlarged in 1913. During the year 1914 the number of in-patients was 618, and of out-patients treated in the Dispensary, 1,733.

The Poor House was erected in 1856, at a cost of £7,000, and new probationary wards were built in 1903, at a cost of £750, the hospital block being remodelled in 1907, at a cost of £3,000.

The Combination Hospital, Drip road, for the treatment of infectious diseases, was opened in 1903, the cost being £14,000.

The newspapers published here are the "Stirling Observer," the "Stirling Journal and Advertiser," the "Bridge of Allan Gazette," the "Stirling and Bridge of Allan Reporter," the "Stirling Sentinel," the "Visitor" and the "Callander Advertiser," all of which circulate throughout the district.

There are branches of the Bank of Scotland, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the Royal Bank of Scotland, the Clydesdale Bank Limited, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, the British Linen Bank and the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited, besides the Stirling Savings Bank.

The principal hotels are the Golden Lion, King street; Lennox' Station Hotel and Douglas Hotel, Murray place, and the Waverley and County Temperance Hotel, Murray place.

Some shipping trade is carried on, and during the summer occasional river steamers from Leith afford a cheap and agreeable outing.

The manufactures of Stirling comprise carpet weaving, worsted spinning, and woollen waste and flock making; there are also rubber works, a large cooperage, an iron foundry, agricultural implements factories, carriage works and cabinet making and confectionery works. There are two large cattle markets, where sales take place on Thursdays, and also on other days as advertised.

The area of the civil parish is 1,825 acres; assessable value, £126,277. The population (after alterations under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1899") in 1901 was 18,609, and in 1911, 21,461, including 8 officers and 172 inmates of the poor house and 204 military and 178 non-military servants &c. in the Castle.

The area of the royal burgh is 1,377 acres; the population in 1901 was 18,403, and in 1911, 21,200.

The population of the municipal wards (exclusive of military) in 1911 was: First or King Street, 3,202; Second or Port Street, 4,546; Third or Baker Street, 3,884; Fourth or Cowane Street, 6,083; Fifth or St. Ninian's, 3,103.

The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911 was 11,550.

The population of the parliamentary burgh in 1911 was 21,200.

The number of electors on the Stirling parliamentary register in 1915 was 3,502.

Mary Kirk is a quoad sacra parish taken from that of Stirling; population in 1911, 5,494.

SUTHERLANDSHIRE

THIS is the most northerly but one of the counties of Scotland, and is bordered on the north and west by the Atlantic Ocean, which accounts for the rugged and deeply indented coasts on those two faces; it also has a coast line of 26 miles on the Moray Firth on the south-east, and 18 miles along the Dornoch Firth on the south, its remaining boundaries on the east and south being the counties of Caithness and Ross respectively, but though it possesses this extensive sea coast it has only one port of any importance, viz. Dornoch, on the south-east coast; from east to west it extends 62 miles, and from north to south 49 miles. It has an area of 2,027.9 square miles, or 1,297,914 acres, exclusive of 47,631 acres of water, 12,812 of foreshore, and 1,553 of tidal water. The population in 1901 was 21,440, and in 1911, 20,179, viz.: 9,861 males and 10,318 females; the inhabited houses in 1901 were 4,760, and in 1911, inhabited, 4,686; uninhabited, 330 and building, 17. In size it ranks as the fifth, and in population as the twenty-ninth, of the counties of Scotland.

Early History.—This northern county appears to have been held by the Picts, and though the Romans penetrated here, there seems to be no record of any permanent occupation by them. The Dalriads in 767 fought the Picts at Forteviot, Perthshire, but did not succeed in penetrating further, though in 843 their king succeeded to the Pictish throne, and these northern tribes had to turn their attention to resisting the constant invasions of the Danes, and were also frequently engaged in clan feuds. King James I. made several expeditions to the north to control the clans, but these feuds continued; early in the 15th century the Lord of the Isles invaded this county, but was defeated at the Sands of Fleet, and in 1517 the Mackays made an incursion, but were repulsed. These feuds continued up to the early part of the 17th century, and in 1650 Montrose ravaged these parts.

Surface, Soil, Produce &c.—This large county consists almost entirely of an uninterrupted succession of mountains, valleys and morasses. The northern and western coasts are bold and rocky, deeply indented by inlets and bays, and with many large promontories, among which Cape Wrath, at the north-western corner, is most prominent. The shire comprehends the political districts of Strathnaver (anciently a county of itself), Assynt and Sutherland, the first-named including the northern part, and the two latter the southern. The interior is divided naturally into three districts—the Eastern, the Middle and the Western. The first is a level narrow strip of land on the east coast, sheltered from the north by a ridge of mountains from 300 to 800 feet high; the second is occupied by the four straths of the rivers Helmsdale, Brora, Fleet and Oykel; and the Western district, which borders on the Atlantic, is wild and mountainous, abounding in salt and fresh water lochs. The mountains of greatest altitude in the shire are Ben More, 3,235; Ben Clebrig, 2,157 and Ben Hope, 3,040 feet above the level of the sea. The large extent of Sutherlandshire was the last district in Scotland subjected to the improvements of modern times. Until about the close of the XVIII. century it was a country lying in nearly the same condition as it must have exhibited centuries before, and, in many respects, was shut out from the progress of civilisation. The great barrier to improvement was the dangerous narrow firths to be crossed, and the total destitution of roads, either along the shore or into the interior. Two circumstances at length brought about the introduction of efficient measures of improvement. The first was the exertions made by the noble family of Gower, and the second was by Parliament, which agreed to advance a moiety of the expense for certain roads and bridges in the Highlands. Breeding of sheep is the great staple business of the shire, for which its sheltered straths and swelling hills, as well as its climate, eminently adapt it. The county rears many thousands of sheep, mostly of the Cheviot breed, of which a great number are annually exported. The soil, being of a sandy, open-bottomed nature, bears excellent crops of oats, barley, turnips and clover.

The crops in 1914, as shown by the "Agricultural Statistics of Scotland," are—oats, 7,745 acres; barley, including bere, 644; rye, 27; the total corn crops being 8,416 acres; turnips and swedes, 2,981 acres; potatoes, 1,337; vetches, tares, beans, mashlum &c. 40; other crops, 35; total green crops, 4,387; hay from rye-grass and other rotation grasses and clover, 4,406 acres; pasture (not for hay), 5,695; bare fallow, 63; the total area of land being 1,297,914 acres, of which 857,610 acres are mountain and heath (used for grazing), 8,424 permanent grass, 22,976 arable land and 18,647 woods and plantations.

The live stock in 1914 comprised—horses used for agriculture and brood mares, 1,919; other horses, 829; cows in milk, 4,295; cows in calf but not in milk, 698; heifers in calf, 365; other cattle, two years and above, 1,366; one year and under two, 2,452; under one year, 2,388; ewes kept for breeding, 83,591; other sheep, one year and above, 50,733; under one year, 72,677; sows kept for breeding, 92; other pigs, 582. The exports of farm produce have been much assisted by the erection of piers at Helmsdale and other places on the coast, chiefly at the cost of the late Duke of Sutherland.

AGRICULTURAL HOLDINGS:—Above one and not exceeding five acres, 1,493; above five and not exceeding 15 acres, 760; above 15 and not exceeding 30 acres, 148; above 30 and not exceeding 50 acres, 31; above 50 and not exceeding 75 acres, 28; above 75 and not exceeding 100 acres, 17; above 100 and not exceeding 150 acres, 19; above 150 and not exceeding 300 acres, 25; above 300 acres, 10; total, 2,531.

Coal has for many years been wrought at Brora, the total amount being included with Argyll in the 1913 "Mineral Statistics." Sandstone was raised in 1913 to the extent of 1,210 tons and brick clay, 3,000 tons. From the fishing stations on the coast there are annually exported immense quantities of herrings, besides cod and ling. This county is almost devoid of manufactures, the only works being at Brora and Rogart, at which places tweeds, blankets &c. are made. Hand looms are, however, still worked in many of the crofters' houses.

The chief rivers are the Brora, Borgie, Naver, Helmsdale, Halladale, Laxford, Inchard, Inver, Shin, Fleet, Strathmore and Gruke; the chief sea lochs, the Fleet, Glencoul, Glendhu, Inver and Laxford, and the principal fresh water lochs are the Assynt, Cama, Garbetbeg, Hope, Loyal, Meadie, Merkland, More, Naver, Shin (17 miles long) and the Vevatie. The railway system belongs to the Highland Railway Company and comprises a line which, coming north from Inverness, turns to the west when it reaches the Dornoch Firth and enters this county at Invershin, runs due north to Lairg, when it turns eastward to Golspie, runs up the coast to Helmsdale, where it turns again to the west and north-west, quitting the county near Forsinard station and proceeding to Wick and Thurso; from the latter place steamers run to the Orkney Islands.

Divisions, Representation &c.—Sutherlandshire comprises 13 parishes and 16 entire and part of 1 ecclesiastical parish, in the synod of Sutherland and Caithness. It contains only one town, Dornoch, which is a royal and parliamentary burgh, joining with Kirkwall, Wick, Dingwall, Tain and Cromarty in returning one representative, and the county at large sends another. The parliamentary constituency in 1915 numbered 3,215.

BRORA is a thriving village, in the parish of Clyne and small debt court district of Dornoch; it is on the south-east coast, at the point where the river Brora falls into the Moray Firth, and is about 12 miles south-south-west from Helmsdale, and 6 north-north-east from Golspie, and has a station on the Georgemas Junction and Golspie section of the Highland railway. Here are Established and Free churches, and services are held in the English church during the summer months only. The climate is very dry and the temperature warm, and the sands here attract a large number of bathers. The links have long been famous for golf. There is excellent fishing in the Brora water, and at Strathbrora, both of which places abound with salmon. About a mile of free sea trout fishing is also to be had. The curing of fish employs some of the inhabitants, and there is a distillery in the neighbourhood, and a coal pit which has been worked for 300 years. Bricks and tiles are made here, and there is a large tweed mill. In the village is a branch of the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank.

DORNOCH, a parish on the south-east coast, to the north of Dornoch Firth, is also a small seaport and a royal and parliamentary burgh, the capital of the county and head of a sheriff court, and in the Sutherland poor combination; it is 9 miles north from Tain, 7 south from Golspie and 15 north from Cromarty. The parish, which is bounded north by Golspie, south by Creich and west by Rogart, is 10 miles in length from east to west by 6 in breadth, and has a terminal station on a branch from the Mound on the Highland railway. Dornoch was constituted a royal burgh by Charles I. in 1628, and is governed by a provost, two bailies, a dean of guild and a treasurer, with four councillors. In conjunction with Wick, Kirkwall, Dingwall, Cromarty and Tain, it forms the Wick parliamentary district, returning one member. The trade of the town is very limited, owing chiefly to its locality at an angle of the county and the free navigation of the Firth being obstructed by the bar of dangerous sand banks extending between Dornoch and Tain. Of late years on account of its fine golf links, upon which there are two 18-hole courses, and its sands and sea bathing, the town has become highly popular as a summer resort. The water supply and drainage are both good. A Free Library, the gift of Andrew Carnegie esq. of Skibo Castle, was opened in 1907. The cathedral, now serving only as the parish church, was originally the head of the diocese of Caithness, founded, it is said, by King David I. (1124-53), but at present, for the purposes of the Episcopal Church in Scotland, is united to those of Moray and Ross, with a cathedral church at Inverness. The cathedral of Dornoch was first erected by Gilbert de Moray, bishop of Caithness (1223-80), and is in the Early English and Early Geometric styles, consisting of choir, aisleless nave, transepts and a low central tower with stunted spire: the church, with the exception of the tower, was almost entirely destroyed by fire in 1570, during an incursion of hostile tribes, and on 5 November, 1605, one of the arcades was blown down by a violent gale; John, 12th Earl of Sutherland, in 1614 began the repair of the fabric, which was subsequently completed in a plain style. In 1836-7, the Duchess and Countess of Sutherland (d. 1839) restored the church to its original dimensions and added the groined roof; at the west end is a memorial with marble effigy by Chantrey, to George, 2nd Marquess and 1st Duke of Sutherland K.G., P.C. d. 19 July, 1833. A small part of the bishop's palace still remains, but all the manses of the other dignitaries of the cathedral have disappeared, and the town has lost much of its ecclesiastical importance since the triumph of the Reformation. Here also are Free and United Free churches. Within half a mile from the village of Clashmore is Skibo Castle, the seat of Andrew Carnegie esq.: this castle, at one time a residence of the Bishops of Sutherland and Caithness, was for a long time a fortress, and the celebrated Marquess of Montrose, in the year 1650, spent two nights as a prisoner in the castle, after his defeat by the Presbyterian army near Bonar Bridge, and his subsequent capture by Neil Macleod, of Assynt, who delivered him up to his enemies: subsequently the castle was dismantled and allowed to go to ruin, until early in the last century, when it was demolished and the present castle erected on its site. Large additions were made to the castle in 1899.

A public fair or market is held annually in the town, on the first Tuesday in November. The Duke of Sutherland and Andrew Carnegie esq. are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 33,012 acres: burgh, 1,325 acres; rateable value of the landward, £7,252, and of the burgh, £1,790; the population in 1911 was 2,760, which included 741 in the royal burgh, and the ecclesiastical parish, 2,724.

The population of the parliamentary burgh in 1911 was 654; number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1915 was 136.

CLASHMORE is a modern village, about 4 miles west from Dornoch, and on the estate of Skibo, now the property of Andrew Carnegie esq. A fair is held here on the first Monday in May.

EMBO, a fishing village in this parish, is 2 miles north-east from Dornoch, with a station on the Dornoch branch of the Highland railway. Here is a new harbour for fishermen, constructed to a great extent by Government aid.

GOLSPIE is a parish and village—the latter, situated on the Moray Firth, 8 miles north of Dornoch, 16 north from Tain and 15 east of Lairg, has a station on the main line of the Highland railway, and there is another station at Mound on the south boundary of the county; the parish, which is in the small debt court district of Dornoch and poor combination of Sutherland, is 8 miles from east to west by 6 deep, and is bounded north by Clyne, west by Rogart and south by Dornoch. The parish church, a small building, erected in 1619, stands within a well enclosed burial ground, surrounded by trees: at the west end of the village is the Free church, and at Fountain road, in the middle of the village, is the United Free church. The great parliamentary road passes through the village, in which there are branches of the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited, and the British Linen Company's Bank. The pier was constructed at a cost of £2,000, defrayed by the County Council. The Sutherland Technical School here was founded in 1903 by the Duchess of Sutherland, the building and equipment being provided by the Duke of Sutherland K.G. and Andrew Carnegie esq. LL.D. and is available for 48 boarders. Near by is the Lawson Memorial Hospital, erected and endowed by the late Alexander B. Lawson, of Clynelish, and opened July 27, 1900, for non-infectious medical and surgical cases occurring in the county of Sutherland, and has 10 beds. Here is an 18-hole golf course. To the north of the village stands Dunrobin Castle, the seat of the Duke of Sutherland, lord lieutenant of the county. It is known to have existed in the 12th century, and, according to old historians, it was even long before that period the family fortalice of the ancient Thanes and Earls of Sutherland, tradition fixing the date of erection as 1098. Malcolm Caenmore (1057-1093) bestowed the title of earl on the then Thane of Sutherland, and William, the 4th earl, married the lady Margaret, daughter of King Robert Bruce: the castle is a massive edifice of freestone, with turrets, in the Scottish style; its high-pitched roofs and turret caps giving it the appearance of a French chateau; at one angle is a tower over 100 feet in height, with an arched gateway leading into the courtyard: the grand staircase of polished Caen stone is very fine, and there are some good rooms, including the state rooms on the sea front, appropriated to the use of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria, during her visit in 1842, and a good collection of pictures and a museum; the gardens are large and well laid out; the mountain called Ben-Bhraggle towers over all to the height of 1,300 feet; upon its summit is a lofty monument to a former Duke of Sutherland, and near the village a memorial has been erected to the late Duchess, raised by subscription. There is a private railway station on the Highland line, near the Castle, where trains stop by signal only. The Duke of Sutherland is the principal landowner. The area comprises 19,678 acres; rateable value, £7,189; the population in 1911 was 1,685.

BACKIES is a small village in the parish.

HELMSDALE is a modern village, in the parish of Kildonan, and in the Sutherland poor combination; a small debt court district is held here twice a year. There is a station here on the Highland railway. The village is 60 miles south-by-west from Wick and 17 north-north-east from Golspie, at the mouth of the river from which it takes it name, and on the coast road that passes northward to Wick. A harbour was constructed in 1896 at a cost of £14,000. The river that flows through the extensive strath to Kildonan abounds with salmon. Fishing is carried on to some extent. In 1914, 4 boats were engaged employing 16 men and boys, the total value of the fish landed being £6,708. Here are Established, Free and United Free churches. In the village is a branch of the British Linen Bank. Just opposite the village stand the ruins of a castle, built by Margaret Baillie, Countess of Sutherland, after the death of her husband John, 7th Earl of Sutherland, in 1460; her son, with whom she had some differences, damaged it, but it was restored in July, 1567; these ruins serve as a landmark to mariners. The principal landowner is the Duke of Sutherland. The population in 1911 was 744.

WEST HELMSDALE is a village on the west bank of the river Helmsdale.

TONGUE is a parish and village in the north central part of the county, and divided into two for about half its length by the Kyle of Tongue, a deep inlet of the sea on the north coast, off which lies the Island of Roan, which is also included in this parish. The parish is 18 miles in length from north to south by about 9 broad, and has on its eastern side the large loch of Laoghal, 5 miles long: the parish is bounded by the Atlantic Ocean on the north, the parish of Farr on the east and south, and Durness on the west; it is in the small debt court district of Tongue and the poor combination of Sutherland, and is watered by the rivers Borgie and Kinloch, together with lochs Laoghal, Dherue, Meadie, and many small lakes; it is also very mountainous, Ben Hutick being 1,340 feet, and Laoghal 2,504 feet above the sea level. The village of TONGUE lies on the east side of loch Laoghal, 5 miles from its mouth, and has Established, Free and United Free churches, and one of the latter at Melness; there is also a comfortable hotel and a library and reading room. A small debt court is held at Tongue village twice a year. The area comprises 81,048 acres; rateable value, £4,421 4s. 5d.; the population in 1911 was 1,609, including 63 on Roan Island.

WIGTOWNSHIRE

THIS, the extreme south-western county of Scotland, formed part of the ancient district of Galloway; it is extremely irregular in shape, caused by the indentation of Luce Bay on the south, an open space of water 13 miles wide by 16 from north to south, its western head forming the Mull of Galloway, and the eastern one Burrowhead: these two headlands are known by the Celtic name of the Rhinns (Rhyns or Rhynns) of Galloway. On the eastern boundary of the county Wigtown Bay extends from Grange of Cree, on the north, to Eggerness, just north of Garlieston Bay, a distance of 8 miles: and on the north of the county Loch Ryan indents for a like distance. Its boundaries are the Irish Channel on the west and south, Wigtown Bay and Kirkcudbrightshire on the east and Ayrshire on the north, its length being 32 miles, and extreme breadth from east to west 28, and comprises 311,984 acres of land and 2,796 of water. The population in 1901 was 32,685, and in 1911, 31,998, viz.:—males, 15,078; females, 16,920. The inhabited houses in 1901 were 6,902, and in 1911, inhabited 7,140, uninhabited 526, building 24. Wigtownshire stands seventeenth in point of size and the twenty-second in population of Scottish counties.

Early History.—When in 79 A.D. the Romans crossed the Solway into North Britain, the ancient British tribes of the "Novantes" inhabited the whole of western Galloway, having "Leucophibia" (the modern Whithorn) for their principal town, and "Rerigonium" (Loch Ryan) for their principal port, and during the Roman occupation, 397, St. Ninian introduced Christianity and founded a monastery at Whithorn; after the Romans had evacuated the kingdom in 410, the Strathclyde Britons gained the upper hand, but the Anglo-Saxons overran the district in the 6th century, and Oswey, the Northumbrian king, settled at Whithorn. During the 9th and 10th centuries the county on the west was inhabited by the Picts from Ireland and the Isle of Man, and hence the name of Galloway, or "the country of the Gael," was conferred on the territory. About the 12th century Galloway passed into the hands of the Scottish king, Alexander II. In the sanguinary conflicts between Bruce and Baliol, the chieftains of Galloway long remained attached to the party of the latter, whose family they sheltered after Edward Bruce had subdued the whole country. The family of Douglas subsequently became possessed of the lordship of Galloway; but, on the attainder of the nobleman of that name in 1455, the title became extinct. It was revived, however, in 1623, and now bestows an earldom on the Stewarts. Lord Garlies, but the Maxwells of Nithsdale received a portion of the estates. The proximity to Ireland and the Isle of Man caused the country of the Gael to remain for a long period a separate community from the rest of Scotland, and the Gaelic dress, manners and language lingered here long after they fell into desuetude in the rest of the Lowlands. Their chiefs derived their authority sometimes from the kings of Scotland and at others from the kings of Northumbria, but neither could subdue the turbulence and insubordination of the chieftains or their vassals, who were very troublesome neighbours. The position of the shire so much to the west preserved it from many of the border raids, nor was it associated to any extent in the movements of 1715 and 1745, and Queen Mary's progress from Langside to cross to England led her through Kirkcudbrightshire.

Soil, Climate, Produce &c.—This shire is one of the most level districts in Scotland; and the hills, of which there are none of great altitude, are generally pretty free from rocks; the best lands lie near the shores, the inland division being more elevated, and largely mixed with heath and moss. The major part of the soil is of that kind sometimes called a dry loam, though it often inclines to a gravelly nature. The county presents an exposure to the south, and its waters mostly descend to the Irish Sea. The climate is moist, with winds from the south-west, which prevail during the greater part of the year. In early times this district of Galloway, like most other sections of the country, was covered with woods; and in modern days planting has been pursued most extensively, and the salutary improvements that have been effected in this county have been ascribed to the efforts of the Agricultural Society of Dumfries. This district has long been pre-eminent as being an excellent pastoral one, and for the superiority of its wool.

The chief crops in 1914, as appears from the "Agricultural Statistics of Scotland," were:—Oats, 30,092 acres; barley, including bere, 504; wheat, 80; beans (to be harvested as corn), 125; rye, 36; total corn crops, 30,837 acres; turnips and swedes, 13,795 acres; potatoes, 1,328; mangolds, 312; cabbage, 71; rape, 125; vetches, tares, beans, mashlum &c. 110; total green crops, 15,741 acres; hay from rye-grass and other rotation grasses and clover, 5,342; pasture (not for hay), 58,116; bare fallow, 85 acres. The total area of land is 311,984 acres, of which 113,887 are mountain and heath land (used for grazing), 46,361 permanent grass, 110,153 arable land and 9,675 woods and plantations.

The live stock in 1914 comprised—horses used solely for agriculture and brood mares, 3,535; stallions, 72; unbroken horses, one year and above, 1,253; under one year, 510; other horses, 806; cows in milk, 24,972; in calf but not in milk, 783; heifers in calf, 2,013; other cattle, two years and above, 9,676, one year and under two, 8,774, under one year, 9,864; ewes kept for breeding, 51,252; other sheep, one year and above, 17,721, under one year, 48,742; sows kept for breeding, 1,048; other pigs, 15,670.

AGRICULTURAL HOLDINGS:—Above 1 and not exceeding 5 acres, 192; above 5 and not exceeding 15 acres, 185; above 15 and not exceeding 30 acres, 104; above 30 and not exceeding 50 acres, 92; above 50 and not exceeding 75 acres, 102; above 75 and not exceeding 100 acres, 101; above 100 and not exceeding 150 acres, 143; above 150 and not exceeding 300 acres, 299; above 300 acres, 133; total, 1,341.

The only mineral raised, as shown by the "Mines and Quarries General Report and Statistics" for 1913, was 15,310 tons of igneous rocks.

The shipping trade of Wigtownshire has felt the impetus of steam navigation, the ports of Stranraer, Wigtown and Whithorn deriving considerable benefit from the coasting trade. There is also great activity in the fisheries connected with the numerous ports and lochs, and this industry is carried on at Stranraer and Wigtown, under which places full particulars will be found. There is an almost entire absence of manufactures in this shire, if we except mills at Kirkcowan and Minnigaff, at which blankets, tweeds &c. are made. The great industry of Wigtownshire is, however, the production of cheese by the farmers of the Rhins district of the county, who have been for many years the principal prize takers for the celebrated Cheddar cheese made by them.

Rivers and Mountains.—This county has no considerable rivers; the principal are the Cree, the Bladenoch and the Tarf, with a few of smaller size. The Cree, which is a boundary river between this county and the stewartry of Kirkcudbright, rises in Carrick, in Ayrshire; after forming a lake at the head of Wigtownshire, it flows again as a stream, and, passing Newton Stewart on the east, falls into a creek at the head of Wigtown Bay. The Bladenoch also has its source in Carrick, and, after running a course of 24 miles, falls into Wigtown Bay. The Tarf issues from a small lake in Ayrshire, and, after a course of 21 miles, unites with the Bladenoch. The mountains, with their elevations above the level of the sea, are:—Lang, 1,758 feet; Mochrum Fell, 1,020 feet; Knock of Luce, 1,014 feet, and Barhullion, 814 feet. The railway system belongs to the Glasgow and South Western and the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire lines; the former, running south from Ayr and Girvan, enters the county 3 miles north of Glenwhilly station and runs through New Luce to Dunragit station, where it joins the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire railway, which is an independent line leaving Newton Stewart and running westward through Glenluce to Stranraer, from whence it sends a branch to Portpatrick, and also sends a branch from Newton Stewart southward to Wigtown and Whithorn.

Divisions, Representation &c.—Wigtownshire comprehends 17 civil parishes and 20 complete and part of one ecclesiastical parishes and the small islands called The Scares, not attached to any parish, and has three royal burghs, namely, Wigtown, Stranraer and Whithorn, and one police burgh, Newton Stewart. Prior to the "Redistribution of Seats Act, 1885," these three last-mentioned towns, in conjunction with New Galloway, returned one member to Parliament; but on the passing of that Bill the representation was merged in the counties. The county sends one member. The burghs of barony in the shire are Newton Stewart, Garlieston, Kirkcowan, Glenluce and Portpatrick: it has several thriving villages, and a number of small seaports, or natural harbours, and many mansions and seats. The parliamentary constituency in 1915 numbered 5,984.

GLENLUCE, see OLD LUCE.

INCH is a parish, in Wigtownshire poor combination and Stranraer small debt court district, about 8 miles in length, extending for 6 miles along the eastern shore of Loch Ryan, and about 6 miles in breadth, and is bounded on the north by Ayrshire, east by the water of Luce, which separates it from New Luce, south-east by Old Luce, and south by the Piltanton Burn, which divides it from Stoneykirk, and west by Portpatrick and Leswalt. A portion of the burgh of Stranraer is in this parish. The kirk is 1½ miles north from Castle Kennedy station, which is in the parish, on the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire railway, 3 east from Stranraer and 21 west from Newton Stewart. There is also a United Free church. The highest mountains in the parish are—Mid Moile, 844 feet high; Brock'och Fell, 764 feet, and Drummuck'och Boech, 700 feet. The ruins of the old parish church stand on the margin of the lake, in which there is a small and beautifully wooded island; the lake is divided into two portions called the "Black loch" and "White loch," by a neck of land on which are the ruins of Castle Kennedy, the property of the Earl of Stair. The castle was formerly the seat of the family of the Earls of Cassillis, who for 300 years took a leading part in Galloway affairs; it was accidentally burnt down in 1715, during the absence of the family, and has ever since remained a ruin; in an island on the Black loch is a heronry; the grounds are open to the public every Wednesday and Saturday, and contain a collection of araucarias, said to be the finest in Great Britain. At a short distance south of Inch church, on a peninsula in a small lake, are the remains of Soulseat Monastery, founded about 1160 by Fergus, Lord of Galloway, for monks of the Premonstratensian order; its abbot was the head of his order in Scotland. Loch Inch Castle is the residence of the Earl of Stair J.P. Acreage, 30,844; rateable value, landward £16,601; burghal (part of Stranraer), £7,802; population in 1901, 3,876, and in 1911, 3,694, of which 2,140 were in the burgh of Stranraer. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911 was 3,694. Included in the total parish were 7 officials and 105 inmates of Wigtownshire Combination Poorhouse and 90 in the Reformatory School for Boys.

CAIRNRYAN is a small village in this parish, on the eastern margin of Loch Ryan and on Cairn Point, 6 miles north-north-east from Stranraer, which is the nearest railway station. There are Established and United Free churches. The harbour here affords safe anchorage for vessels, which frequently take refuge here, and there is a lighthouse for their guidance. Loch Ryan House, close to the village, is the residence of John Alexander Agnew Wallace esq. D.L., J.P. At Castle Kennedy is a station on the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire railway.

KIRKMAIDEN is a parish occupying a great portion of the western limb or peninsula of Wigtownshire, projecting into the Irish Sea, with Luce Bay on the east, and tapering to a point, inclining eastward. This parish, which is in Wigtownshire poor combination and Stranraer small debt court district, comprehends the most southerly district of Scotland, and is about 12 miles in length and from 1½ to 3 miles in breadth: it still has a wild appearance, but produces good crops of corn and potatoes, and has a very large number of dairy farms. The coast is generally bold, and indented by caves, one of which contains the cave-chapel of St. Medan, standing on a shelf in the face of the cliff: it is now roofless, only the front wall with traces of a doorway and a splayed window, and the back wall with an opening leading into the inner cave, now remaining. On both sides of the peninsula, however, there are several good anchoring grounds. There is a tolerable harbour at Drummore, in Luce bay, on the east coast, where the coast guard has a station, under the command of a chief boatman; vessels of small tonnage frequently call here. Salmon fishing is carried on at Chapel Rossan, and cod fishing at Drummore. The church, a plain edifice, is near the centre of the parish, not far from Drummore Bay, and 6 miles from the Mull of Galloway, 35 south-west from Wigtown, 36 south-west from Newton Stewart, 18 south-east from Stranraer, and 16 south-east from Portpatrick station on the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire railway. There is also a United Free church at DRUMMORE, and a Congregational chapel at LOGAN. The ancient church of Kirkmaiden stood on the farm of the Mull, a mile north of the isthmus of Tarbet. On the estate of Andrew Kenneth M'Douall esq. of Logan, is a fish pond, hewn out of the solid rock, and having communication with the sea by means of a natural gulley in which are built large stones between which the water ebbs and flows, but the fish cannot pass. The parish of Kirkmaiden has an area of 13,675 acres; rateable value, £12,609; population in 1901, 1,943, and in 1911, 1792.

Drummore is a village about one mile east from Kirkmaiden. The population in 1901 was 459.

OLD LUCE (or Glenluce) is a parish, in Wigtownshire poor combination and Stranraer small debt court district, about 12 miles long by a width varying from 3½ to 7½, and is bounded on the north by Inch and New Luce, north-east by Drumpail Burn, which separates it from Kirkcowan, east by Mochrum and south by Luce Bay. Glenluce is a village and burgh of barony on the banks of the river Luce, and on the road from Newton Stewart to Stranraer, at the head of Luce Bay, which here forms a tolerably good harbour for small vessels; it is 19 miles east from Portpatrick, 18 west from Wigtown, 16 south-west from Newton Stewart and 10 east-by-south from Stranraer. The Portpatrick and Wigtownshire joint line runs through the town, and is joined by the Girvan line at Dunragit station, which is in the parish. There is an Established church and one United Free church, and a Public Hall and Reading Room. The principal hotel is the "King's Arms." About a mile to the north of the church, and further up the vale from which the village takes its name, are the ruins of Luce Abbey, founded by Rolland, Lord of Galloway, in 1190, for monks of the Cistercian order; the ruins at present cover about an acre and a half, but the only part now remaining entire is the Chapter house, a small apartment on the east side of the cloisters, with a central shaft, about 14 feet high, from which spring eight arches supporting the roof: tradition reports that Michael Scott, the wizard, was once abbot here: many curiosities, together with several skeletons, in an upright position, have been found on the site: in the collections of the Ayrshire and Galloway Archæological Association, vol. v. a full description is given of the abbey, with plans. Dunragit House, in this parish, is the seat of John Charles Cuninghame esq. D.L., J.P. The Earl of Stair, J. C. Cuninghame esq. Sir Mark McTaggart Stewart bart. V.D., M.A., D.L., J.P., A. K. M'Douall esq. D.L., J.P. and Mrs. Stewart are the principal landowners. Acreage of the parish, 31,596; rateable value, £19,400; population in 1911, 2,096; of the village of Glenluce, 774.

MOCHRUM is a parish and village, in Wigtownshire poor combination and Wigtown small debt court district about 10 miles in length and extending inland to a distance of between 4 and 5 miles; it is bounded on the west by Ole Luce, north by Kirkcowan, east by Kirkinner, and south-west by Luce Bay. The village is 4½ miles south-west from Whauphill station on the Wigtown branch of the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire railway, and about 8 south-west from Wigtown, and has an Established church. Mochrum Loch, about 1½ miles long by half a mile wide, and Castle Loch, 1 mile in length by half a mile in breadth, as well as four smaller lochs, are in the parish. Malzie water, a tributary of the Bladenoch, is formed from the first-named lochs. The Castle, or "Old Place" of Mochrum, surrounded by lakes, is a very ancient and picturesque building in an inland part of the parish: it was formerly the family seat of the Dunbars, knights of Mochrum, but has for many years been the property of the Marquess of Bute, who has made alterations at considerable expense. In this parish is Monreith, the handsome residence and demesne of the Right Hon. Sir Herbert Eustace Maxwell bart. Lord Lieut. and proprietor of the place: the mansion, which stands on the bank of a fine lake, commands an extensive prospect of the Bay of Luce, the shore of Galloway, the Isle of Man and the coast of Cumberland. Near it is an old castle surrounded by lofty trees, and contiguous are the remains of the old parish church of Kirkmaiden, now occupied as a place of sepulture by the family of Maxwell, whose ancestors formerly possessed the estate. Acreage of the parish, 24,101; rateable value, £13,031; population in 1901, 1,958, and in 1911, 1,822, of which 645 are in Port William village, of which full particulars are given under a separate heading.

NEWTON STEWART

NEWTON STEWART is a thriving town, a burgh of barony and police burgh, principally in the parish of Penningham, with a small portion on the opposite side of the stream in the parish of Minnigaff, county of Kirkcudbright. It is on the high road from Dumfries to Portpatrick, and on the right bank of the river Cree, here crossed by a bridge of five arches, connecting the two divisions of the town: and has a station on the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire railway, which is also the junction for the line to Garlieston and Whithorn; the town is 121 miles south-west from Edinburgh, 82 south from Glasgow, 52 west from Dumfries, 26 east from Stranraer and 8 north from Wigtown, and owes its origin to a younger branch of the Stewarts, Earls of Galloway, who possessed the estate of Castle-Stewart, and founded the village upon it, to which they gave the name of Newton Stewart. The town is principally composed of one large street, in the centre of which is the Town House, and is governed by a provost, two bailies and nine councillors. Here is an Established church, and there are United Free and Roman Catholic churches. Works were completed in 1882 for providing water by gravitation, the source of supply being the Coldstream burn, about 4 miles distant: about half way between the intake at the burn and the town a tank and filter have been constructed, the former having a capacity of 100,000 gallons; the cost of the works was upwards of £4,000. Drainage works were carried out in 1899, at a cost of 8,000. The Douglas Academy, founded by Samuel Douglas esq. of Jamaica and the Ewart Institute, founded by James and John Ewart, merchants, of this district, are richly endowed educational establishments, incorporated under the title of the Newton Stewart Educational Trust. The Industrial Home here was founded by a few benevolent ladies, for the support of about fifty destitute and orphan girls. M'Millan Hall, in the centre of the town, is a structure in the Italian style, erected in 1885 at a cost of £5,000, which sum was left for that purpose by the family from which the hall derives its name, and who formerly carried on business in Newton Stewart. The Mechanics' Institute has a newsroom supplied with the leading newspapers and periodicals, and a library containing about 1,000 volumes. The staple commodity here at present is wool, which is furnished from the surrounding country, and mostly supplied to the Yorkshire markets. The weekly market is held on Friday: cattle markets are held on the second Friday in every month, and the annual hiring fairs are held on the second Friday in April and October and the horse fairs in February, June and November. The British Linen Bank, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the Clydesdale Bank Limited and the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, have each a branch here. The principal hotels are the "Galloway Arms" and the "Crown." A newspaper called the "Galloway Gazette" is published here every Saturday. A monument in the Gothic style was erected here in 1875, at a cost of £1,000, to Randolph, 9th Earl of Galloway, who died at Galloway House near Garlieston, 2 Jan. 1873. At the upper extremity of that part of the town which lies in Minnigaff parish, there is a large moat hill, where David Graham, brother to the famous John Graham, of Claverhouse, Viscount Dundee, and superior of this district prior to the Revolution, administered justice. The area of the burgh is 234 acres: rateable value, £10,431; the population in 1901, 2,204, and of the town 2,598, in 1911, of the burgh, 2,063.

PORT LOGAN, see KIRKMAIDEN.

PORTPATRICK is a seaport town, burgh of barony, and a parish on the Irish Sea and on the west coast of the county, in Wigtownshire poor combination and Stranraer small debt court district. The parish is about 5 miles in length from south-west to north-east, and 3 from north-west to south-east, and is bounded by the parish of Leswalt on the north-west, Inch on the north-east, Stoneykirk on the south-east, and the Irish Sea on the south-west. Here is the terminus of the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire railway, with which this place has communication, via Girvan, with the north and west of Scotland, and via Castle Douglas and Dumfries, with the south of Scotland and England. At Colfin, about 3 miles north-east from Portpatrick, is a station on the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire line. The port is 133 miles south-west from Edinburgh, 89 south-south-west from Glasgow, between 34 and 35 west from Wigtown, the same distance west-by-south from Newton Stewart, rather more than 7 south-west from Stranraer, 117 from Dublin, 36 from Belfast and 21 from Donaghadee (19 nautical), on the coast of the North Channel. The town is small, but has been greatly improved by the erection of new houses and the carrying out of an efficient system of drainage and water supply; its situation is delightful, having a fine southern aspect, backed by a ridge of small hills, and it is consequently a great resort for visitors during the summer months. The parish church, built in 1842, has an embattled tower; the United Free church, erected in 1887, is an edifice in the Gothic style. The Portpatrick hotel, situated on an eminence, commands a fine view of the coast of Galloway, and in clear weather the Isle of Man and the Irish coast are both visible. There is a local golf club with two courses and a club house. It was formerly, with the estate of Dunskey, the property of the Lords Montgomery, who resided at the old castle of Dunskey, erected about 1100, and the remains of which stand on the brink of a precipice overhanging the sea. The present Dunskey House is a modern residence, with gabled ends, in the Scottish style, and stands in beautiful grounds, 300 feet above the sea level, and commanding a magnificent view of the Irish Sea. About 1648 the Dunskey estate became the property of the Blair family, whose heiress married James Hunter esq. subsequently created a baronet (1786), under the name of Hunter-Blair. The present owners are the trustees of the late C. L. Orr-Ewing esq. M.P., J.P. whose widow, the Lady Augusta H. E. Inskip, is the present occupier of Dunskey House. The quay is now almost in ruins. Many years ago extensive and important improvements were made in the harbour, under the auspices of the Government and under the direction of Sir John Rennie, the engineer, for the accommodation of Her late Majesty's packets, and a new basin of about 200 feet square was then constructed, and connected with the harbour by means of a channel containing ten feet of water at low tides. The town has a lifeboat and rocket apparatus station. Extensive improvements in this place have been largely effected at the cost of successive owners of the Dunskey estate. Acreage of the parish, 9,145a. 1r. 33p.; rateable value, £8,775; population in 1911, 1,097 and of the ecclesiastical parish, 1,008.

PORT WILLIAM is a seaside village on the shore of Luce Bay, in the parish of Mochrum, 6 miles south-west from Whauphill station on the Wigtown branch of the Port Patrick and Wigtownshire railway, 24 south-east from Stranraer, and 18 south-south-east from Glenluce. The harbour, though not of great extent, is commodious and safe, and from it large quantities of grain and potatoes are exported to Glasgow, Liverpool and other ports on the west coast. The houses in general are very well built, and afford excellent accommodation for families and tourists during the bathing season. Here is a United Free church. The principal hotel is the "Monreith Arms." Population in 1911, 645.

SANDHEAD, see STONEYKIRK.

THE SCARES are a group of small islands, containing in all one acre, but are not attached to any civil parish: they lie at the entrance of Luce Bay, about midway between the Mull of Galloway, the southern point of Kirkmaiden parish and Burrow Head, at the southern extremity of Whithorn parish.

SHEUCHAN, see STRANRAER.

SORBIE is a parish, on the south side of the mouth of Wigtown Bay, and contains the village of Sorbie and the seaport village of Garlieston (which latter see): the first-named is 3 miles inland to the west of Garlieston and 6 south from Wigtown, with a station on the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire railway, and has a United Free church. The parish, which is in the small debt court district of Wigtown and Wigtownshire poor combination, lies for about 9 miles along the coast, which is indented by the bays of Garlieston and Rigg, and possesses two bold headlands, Eggerness to the north and Cruggleton Head to the south of these bays: the boundaries are Kirkinner parish on the north, Glasserton and Whithorn on the west, and the latter on the south-west. The ancient Tower of Sorbie, now a ruin, is about 1 mile north-west of Garlieston and 2 east of the village; it was a stronghold or peel of the Sorby family, and subsequently passed to the Hannays. Between the headlands of Eggerness and Cruggleton is the Park and House of Galloway, erected in 1740 and a seat of Lady McEacharn, and on the headlands themselves are the remains of two ancient castles, one of which, Cruggleton Castle, is believed to have been built by the Danes and Norwegians in 1098, and shortly afterwards fell into the possession of the Kerlies, or M'Kerlies, who retained possession until the Reformation. Previously, they owned Carolton, now Carleton Castle, near Girvan, which the Cathcarts obtained in 1824. Cruggleton Castle is celebrated for one of the successful exploits of Sir William Wallace, the Great Scottish patriot, who, after it had been taken by treachery, recaptured it for his friend, William Kerlie. Eggerness Castle was also built by the Danes. The Established church at MILLISLE, about 1 mile from Garlieston and 2 from Sorbie, and opened in 1877, is a fine cruciform edifice in the Gothic style, with a tower and spire rising to a height of over 60 feet, and was erected at a cost of about £2,500. The area of the parish comprises 9,776 acres: population in 1911, 1,354, including 500 in Garlieston.

Post Office, Sorbie (letters should have Wigtownshire added); Miss Jane Lymburn, sub-postmistress. Delivery, 7.20 a.m.; dispatch, 6.33 p.m.; no sunday delivery of letters. STONEYKIRK (more properly Steven's Kirk) is a parish in Wigtownshire poor combination and Stranraer small debt court district, extending about 12 miles in length by from 3 to 5 in breadth, and comprehends the three old parishes of Stoneykirk, Clayshant and Toskerton; it lies in the western peninsula of the county, to the north of Kirkmaiden, and has an east and south-east coast line on Luce Bay of about 6 miles, and of about 12 miles on the Irish Channel, on its western side, and is bounded on the north by Portpatrick, the Piltanton burn separating it from Inch and Old Luce. The kirk is 6 miles south-east from Stranraer, and about the same distance east from Portpatrick, both of which have stations on the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire railway; there are also stations at Colfin and Dumragit. The surface is generally hilly and of a pastoral character; the low grounds are arable, and in some places planted. Ardwell was constituted a quoad sacra parish in 1902. The kirk, erected at the expense of the late Lady McTaggart-Stewart, at a cost of nearly £5,000, is a building of stone in the Gothic style, and has a western tower with spire. Balgreggan, the property of Arthur Cuthbert esq. stands in a park about 1 mile square: on the estate is an artificial mound, supposed to be of Roman origin, and to have been used as a beacon in time of war. There is a similar mound on the estate of Capt. Edward Orde-Stewart, who resides at Ardwell. The parish contains 19,654 acres; rateable value £17,294 17s. 1d.; population in 1901, 2,420, and in 1911, 2,279.

STRANRAER

STRANRAER (or Stranrawer) is an ancient town, a royal and police burgh and the seat of a presbytery and parish, in Wigtownshire poor combination. The police burgh comprises, in addition to the parish, parts of the parishes of Inch and Leswalt. The town is seated at the head of Loch Ryan, a sea loch which extends for 8 miles from its mouth, and is about 3 miles wide at its broadest part; the burgh has two stations, one in the town and the other at the harbour, both on the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire railway. The Glasgow and South Western and North British railways both have running powers into Stranraer. The burgh is 81 miles south-south-west from Glasgow, nearly 10 north-west from Glenluce, rather more than 8 north-east from Portpatrick and 30 west from Wigtown, and, as a royal burgh, is governed by a provost, two bailies, a dean of guild and 14 councillors. A justice of the peace court is held on the first Monday in every month, and a burgh court on the first Tuesday in each month. The sheriff substitute of the county holds a court on Thursdays, and a small debt court is held fortnightly on Thursdays, during session.

The bay of Stranraer affords excellent anchorage, as the motto on the burgh arms (Tutissima Statio) implies, and the harbour is now large and commodious, and has east and west piers and a breastwork, affording excellent accommodation to all classes of vessels; the east pier is used for the large cross-channel traffic now passing by the Stranraer route between Great Britain and Ireland, and is connected with the railway by a branch line, conveying cattle, goods and passengers direct from the steamers; there is 20 feet of water at high tide at the east pier, and vessels of 1,100 tons burthen can discharge there. In 1909 a portion of the harbour was dredged and the west pier repaired and widened at a cost of about £5,000. The number of vessels that entered the port in 1913 from foreign ports was 6 only, of 2,278 tons. The number in the general coasting trade was 301 arrived, with cargoes and in ballast, of 22,825 tons and 331 departed of 25,196 tonnage; in the intercourse between Great Britain and Ireland 426 arrived of 263,100 tons and 433 of 261,384 tonnage departed. The depth of water in the loch, which is sheltered from all winds, is such as to allow ships to ride at anchor with perfect safety. The bay affords a splendid supply of oysters, the right of fishing for which belongs exclusively, by ancient charter, to John A. A. Wallace esq. of Loch Ryan House, but is now leased to a company who have replenished the beds, and the output is now continually increasing. Several kinds of white fish are caught, and herrings are occasionally obtained here equal in quality to the best caught on any other part of the Scottish coast. The fishing boats belonging to the port are registered with Ballantrae. The sea bathing is excellent, and the loch is beautifully situated for villas. Here is a custom house.

There are two Established churches: that in Church street is a handsome structure in the Pointed style, with a lofty front surrounded by pinnacles. The other church, at Sheuchan, the western extremity of the town, stands on a lofty eminence, and with its tower is a conspicuous landmark from the loch; there are also four United Free churches; the Episcopal Mission church of St. John, in London road, will seat 144 persons; the Reformed Presbyterians and Original Seceders have places of worship, and there are Salvation Army barracks and four Mission halls. The cemetery, situated above the town, presenting a fine view of the loch, is tastefully laid out, and contains some monuments. A Reformatory, now under Government control, was opened in 1855; wood turning, bookbinding, and the manufacture of netting, twine and bee appliances are carried on in the institution, besides the making of clothing and shoes for the inmates.

The County Buildings, in Lewis street, opened in 1874, contain a court house, town hall, and offices for the procurator fiscal, sheriff clerk and witness and committee rooms. The old Town Hall in George street, is now converted into an Athenæum, which has over 100 members. Stranraer has large mills, through which great quantities of grain pass every year; it is also particularly noticeable for the extensive nurseries on all sides of the town, which afford employment to many persons. A new reservoir was constructed in 1908 at a cost of about £8,000. The district is agricultural, grain, cheese and all kinds of farm produce and cattle being conveyed to Glasgow regularly by railway and twice a week by steamer. The market is held on Friday. The following are the annual fairs:—For horses, the first Monday in January, the Thursday before the 29th of June and the Monday before the second Thursday in October; for cattle, on the third Friday in every month, commencing in April and ending in November; other fairs for general business are also held in May and August. The Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the Clydesdale Bank Ltd. the British Linen Bank and the National Bank of Scotland Limited have branches in the town. The principal hotel is the "King's Arms." In the centre of the town stands a building, originally a castle, of considerable antiquity, but the date of its foundation has not been satisfactorily ascertained; it is mentioned in a charter granted by James VI. and is called the "Tower, fortalice and manor place of Chapell," and was once the residence of the family of Kennedy, of Chapel and Chrychan: the tower, or Castle, as it is now termed, was used by Graham of Claverhouse as his head quarters in the district during the Covenanting period: in the year 1614 it was inhabited by John Kennedy, of Grennan, and Elizabeth, his wife, then Lady Ochtrelure. The lands of Ochtrelure are immediately contiguous to the burgh of Stranraer, and are now the property of the Earl of Stair. The area of the civil parish is 61 acres; rateable value, £15,367; of the burgh, 380 acres; valuation of police burgh, £29,615 13s.; the population of the police burgh in 1911 was: part of Inch, 2,140; part of Leswalt, 1,418, and Stranraer, 2,886; total, 6,444.

SHEUCHAN is an ecclesiastical parish taken from those of Leswalt and Portpatrick; it comprises part of the burgh of Stranraer. The population in 1911 was 1,623.

WHAUPHILL, see KIRKINNER.

WHITHORN (or Whithern), is a parish, royal burgh and a village, in the south-east of the county, 11 miles south from Wigtown, 18 by rail from Newton Stewart and 26 from Stranraer, with a terminal station on the Whithorn branch of the Port Patrick and Wigtownshire railway. The parish, which is in the small debt court district of Wigtown and Wigtownshire poor combination, is bounded on the north by the parish of Sorbie, north-west and south-west by Glasserton, and on the south and east by the Irish Channel. In A.D. 80, when the Romans first arrived, this district was peopled by the Novantes, and the town was one of some importance; it was mentioned by Ptolemy under the name of Leucophibia; the Saxons called it Hwitoern, and from the latter the appellation Whithern is derived. St. Ninian built a church here in 397, and attached a monastery to it; this church the Venerable Bede mentioned as being the first built of stone in Scotland; during the 8th century it was the seat of the bishops of Candida Casa, and it formed the episcopal capital of a bishopric of Galloway in the 12th century; after the period of the Reformation, however, it seems to have sunk into obscurity. The see has long been united to that of Glasgow, and now forms part of the revived see designated Glasgow and Galloway. The town consists chiefly of one street running from north to south with several others diverging from it. From successive kings Whithorn received various charters constituting it a burgh of barony; it is now a royal burgh, but the period when it attained that distinction does not appear: it is governed by a provost, two bailies and six councillors. The parish church is a spacious building, erected partly on the ruins of the priory founded by St. Ninian, of which there now only remains a fine 12th century chancel, roofless, but containing some good Early English work, and a perfect western doorway: in the building may be found shields with the armorial bearings of Scotland, the bishops of Galloway, and the Coultharts of Coulthart. There is also a United Free church and a Roman Catholic church. The Town Hall, opened in 1885, is a plain but substantially-built structure, erected at a cost of £1,100, and will hold about 500 persons. There are branches here of the Clydesdale Bank Limited and the National Bank of Scotland Limited. The inhabitants support a subscription library and a Bible Society.

Castlewigg Castle is 3 miles north-west of the village.

The area of the civil parish is 11,891 acres: burgh, 198 acres: rateable value, landward, £15,514; burghal, £4,123; the population of the parish in 1911 was 2,140, including 1,170 in the burgh, and 261 in Isle of Whithorn.

The ISLE OF WHITHORN is a village on the east coast, about 3 miles south-east from the railway station at Whithorn, of which it is the port, and near Burrow Head. The village contains a United Free church and near the village stand the remains of an old church. Population in 1911, 261.

WIGTOWN is a royal burgh, the seat of a presbytery, parish and the capital of the county, and is in Wigtownshire poor combination. The parish extends 5 miles in length by 4 in breadth, and is bounded on the south by the Bladnoch river, north-west and north-east by Newton Stewart and east by Wigtown Bay. The Portpatrick and Wigtownshire railway has a branch from Stranraer. The town is pleasantly seated on a height near the north side of the Bladnoch Water, 2 miles from its junction with the Cree, or Bay of Wigtown, and is 105 miles south-south-west from Edinburgh, 58 south-west from Dumfries, 28 east-by-south from Stranraer, and 7 south from Newton Stewart. It is a place of considerable antiquity, having come into existence during the Middle Ages, from the erection of a castle on the spot by a band of Saxons; the name is derived from the Scand. "wick" or "vig," a dwelling, with the adjunct "ton" or "town." The castle of Wigtown subsequently became a royal residence, but the town itself does not appear to have been conspicuous till the reign of David II. when it gave the title of earl to the family of Fleming. In the year 1581, Wigtown was specified as one of the king's free burghs: as a royal burgh it is governed by a provost, two bailies and twelve councillors. The principal street is a parallelogram of which the internal space is enclosed by a wall and iron railings, and the centre laid out in walks and a bowling green and double tennis court, forming an agreeable promenade for the inhabitants: at the end is a modern cross of granite, sculptured in an elegant manner. There are Established, United Free and Roman Catholic churches. The County Buildings, situated in the centre of the town, include a tower of considerable height, and contain the court room, the sheriff's small debt court the ordinary courts, the sheriff clerk and county fiscal's offices. The sheriff courts are held every Tuesday in time of session; the justice of peace court monthly, on notice from the clerk.

Wigtown harbour is safe, and has a depth of water for vessels of 300 tons: it is the seat of a customs port, its limits being defined by the "Customs Act, 1846," to include the creeks of Wigtownshire and those of the stewartry of Kirkcudbright, from the Mull of Galloway to the mouth of the river Fleet. The number of vessels arrived at the port from foreign parts in 1913 was 3 only, of 399 tons. In the general coasting trade 168 arrived, with cargoes and in ballast, with a tonnage of 13,227, and 198 departed, of 16,009 tons. In 1913 the fishing boats registered under Part IV. of the "Merchant Shipping Act, 1894," as belonging to the port, were included in the Ballantrae returns; fishing boats and their implements to be known by the letters W. N.

An annual cattle show is held in July, and numerously attended. In the town are branches of the British Linen Bank, the National Bank of Scotland Limited and the Clydesdale Bank Limited. There is a subscription library containing about 1,600 volumes. On the top of Windyhill is a monument erected, at a cost of £200, to Margaret Wilson and Margaret M'Lachlan, the martyrs who perished in the Bladnoch Water, in the year 1685. At the western extremity of the parish is a stone circle of 19 granite monoliths, traditionally said to mark the tomb of King Galdus. The parish of Wigtown contains 7,988 acres; burgh, 2,264 acres; rateable value, landward, £4,814; burghal, £6,211; population, 1911, 1,710, the town numbering 1,369.
